ROUND UP BY BRITISH TROOPS

Many New Arrests Are Made in Raids by English Soldiers

BULLETIN.

London, Sept. 27.—Terence MacSwiney, the hunger striking Lord Mayor of Cork, had become so weak this afternoon that he could not speak, said an official bulletin issued at Brixton Jail at 1:30 o'clock. Archbishop Mannix of Australia called at the jail during the afternoon.

Dublin, Sept. 27.—The great flare up of violence throughout Ireland over the week end was followed by numerous military raids and arrests here today.

Among the prominent Sinn Fein leaders arrested was Countess Markiewicz.

This is not the first time that the Countess has seen the inside of a prison for her political activities. She was arrested after the Dublin uprising in 1916 and was sentenced to life imprisonment, but was subsequently released.

The military authorities attempted to arrest the famous actress, Maude Gonne, widow of Major MacBride, who was executed.

She could not be found, so her son was arrested.

Troops succeeded in quelling the fighting at Belfast after three had been killed and many wounded. Twenty-three wounded persons are in the hospital at Belfast.

At least three persons were killed and many wounded in new reign of terror at Belfast. Part of the business district of the city was sacked by mobs. Troops in armored cars were restoring order at latest reports.

A bomb exploded at Cork, where eleven Sinn Fein hunger strikers are slowly dying in jail. A dry goods store was wrecked, but it is not known if any one was killed or wounded.

Four more Irish towns were shot up by policemen—Athlone, Ballinamore Trim and Galway.

The damage in Athlone, Ballinamore and Galway was not so great as at Balbriggan. The policemen contented themselves with smashing windows and furniture and discharging revolvers and hand grenades in the streets. Some business properties were destroyed by exploding bombs.

Following the successful Sinn Fein attack upon the constabulary barracks at Trim, policemen attacked and shot up the town. Several casualties were reported. Stores were burned and the homes of a number of prominent Sinn Feiners were wrecked.

Steps are being taken to prevent Irish newspapers containing accounts of disorders from being sent to Canada.

Near Broadford, a police sergeant was ambushed and shot.

Arthur Griffith, acting president of the Irish Republic, writing in Young Ireland, charges that Unionists in Ireland plan a week of rioting and attacks against Sinn Feiners.

Nets 150,000 Pounds of Fish In 24 Hours

Captain "Jack" Hayes of the East Coast fishing trawler Loon, which docked here today, claimed to have taken the biggest catch in 24 hours ever made in the Atlantic fisheries. He declared that between eight o'clock Friday night and eight o'clock Saturday night he landed 150,000 pounds of fish. The Loon brought in a total of 225,000 pounds, which was discharged at T Wharf.

The trawler arrived at the South Channel, George's Banks, Thursday afternoon, but met with no success until Friday night. Then a haul was netted of 20,000 pounds, with half hour hauls thereafter averaging 6,250 pounds of fish.

CAUGHT MAILING BOMB LETTER

Government Employe Confesses to Postal Inspectors; Arrest Is Near

Postal inspectors under the direction of Acting Inspector in Charge Swift have established the identity of the writer of six or seven threatening letters to Mayor Peters and others. An arrest is near.

The man was caught in the act of depositing a letter in a suburban mail box. After he had dropped the letter he was questioned by inspectors.

He admitted that he had just deposited a letter. The box was opened and the letter found. It was along lines similar to those followed in the previous communications.

The man admitted to being a government employe and said he had sent the letters in the hope that he might secure an increase in wages.

He was not arrested. Instead he is under constant surveillance and a more thorough investigation into his activities is being made.

BIG SHIPS MAY COME TO BOSTON

Transatlantic Liners Want to Land Their Passengers at This Port

Boston will soon take the place of New York as disembarking point for passengers from Europe transported by a number of big transatlantic lines, in the belief of Commissioner of Immigration Henry J. Skeffington.

Mr. Skeffington announced today that agents on a number of lines had conferred with him and were so impressed with the local possibilities for handling passengers that he expected a number of liners would be diverted to this port by wireless.

The passengers would be disembarked at Commonwealth Pier, he said, the steamships then continuing to New York where freight would be unloaded and passengers for the eastern trip taken aboard.

"The agent of one big French line called on me today," said Mr. Skeffington, "and was much impressed by the great advantages that would accrue to his line by disembarking passengers at Boston. Before the war we were able to handle more than 100,000 passengers here annually. There is no reason why we should not do it now with no considerable increase to our force.

"I would call in my scattered men from Portland to Providence on the arrival of any ship and would expedite the handling of passengers."

POLICEMEN HELD AS THIEVES

Dismissed From Force, 3 Wait in Jail for the Grand Jury to Act

Waiving examination and failing to raise the heavy bail set by Judge Parmenter in Municipal Court, the three former policemen of the City Hall avenue station, arrested on charges of breaking and entering in the night time and larceny, were lodged today in Charles street jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Fred H. Webster and John A. Laborne, charged on two counts with breaking and entering and larceny, were held in $2,400 each. Ernest R. Martin, charged on one count was held in $1,200.

CAPTAIN SULLIVAN COMPLAINS.

The original warrant on which the men were arrested Saturday night, charges that on August 26 they broke into the shop of Harry M. Koppell, No. 102-104 Summer street and stole two overcoats worth $75 each, and seven yards of cloth worth $49.

Captain James Sullivan of Station 2, Sergeant William J. Flynn, Special Officer Manning and Sergeant James F. Blaney of headquarters appear as the complainants.

Webster and Lanborne face an additional warrant charging that on the night of September 21 they broke into No. 105-107 Federal street and stole several auto tires, worth $54 each, and six inner tubes, worth $5 each, the property of P. Hugh MacNeil.

The additional complainants on this warrant were P. Hugh MacNeil and James E. O'Brien of Dorchester.

WAIVE EXAMINATION.

The former policemen appeared in court today in citizens' clothes. They were not represented by counsel, and informed the court they would waive examination in the lower court and let their cases go before the Grand Jury.

It was learned today that warrants had been issued for two civilians said to have received stolen goods in connection with these cases.

Information received by Captain Sullivan that an automobile was receiving bundles at a certain spot in the business district led to the investigation resulting in the arrests. It is said that some of the alleged stolen goods were found in a downtown restaurant.

24 FACE COURT IN EAST BOSTON AS "DRUNKS"

Twenty-four persons charged with drunkenness appeared in East Boston court today, having been arrested between Saturday night and Sunday night. Eleven were released, three cases dismissed, one was given a month's suspended sentence, two cases were placed on file, two fined $5 each, one was fined $15, two given ten days and two two months.

Big Banks Will Come to Trust Companies' Aid

Governor Coolidge announced today that the more powerful banks of Boston were preparing to go to the financial aid of the trust companies which have been in trouble since the collapse of the Ponzi scheme.

The Governor's statement was issued after a conference with other State officials to consider the action of the Tremont, Fidelity and Dorchester trust companies in halting payments on savings accounts.

From another source it was learned that the Clearing House Committee would undertake the stabilization of Boston banking, and that the Old Colony Trust Company, the National Shawmut, First National and Merchants National banks would be prominently identified with it.

Governor Coolidge's statement on the situation follows:

"I understand the larger banks are considering what they can do to save the situation by concerted action. I have suggested that the banking houses needed to co-operate and support each other, and that no solvent bank should be forced to close its doors because it can't get funds.

"The Federal Reserve banks are now considering it. The meaning of the Federal Reserve plan is that the banks shall sustain one another.

"Asked if he understood the trust companies in difficulties were solvent, he answered:

"I know nothing to the contrary. Mr. Mitchell of the Cosmopolitan says his bank will pay dollar for dollar. Trouble is caused when people demand cash and the resources are not in cash but in loans and mortgages.

"There is no doubt the money of any person in Massachusetts is safer in a bank than in the person's pocket or at home. The unsettled condition was apparently caused by the Ponzi affair. I don't know that any of the trouble has been due to malice, but it is well understood that there are influences in the community willing to break down all financial structures and all organization—State, church or financial.

"Whether they have had the ear of any class I do not know. But it is significant that depositors of the class which might well be induced by the name of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company were among those to make demands for their deposits.

"It may mean some influences are having the purpose to destroy confidence have been at work among these people."

Governor Coolidge was asked to comment on the action of Bank Commissioner Allen in ordering that former Governor McCall be dropped from the salary list of the $3,143 South Trust Company.

The Governor said he knew nothing of it and added:

"It seems such action should have a reassuring effect. The $3,143 South Trust Company opened a short time ago, and it understand, its directors probably seek to prevent unwarranted salaries being paid."

SEEK SAFETY IN 90-DAY LAW

Following the action of three Boston trust companies in halting withdrawal of savings deposits today, Governor Coolidge hurriedly summoned State officials to a conference to consider the threatening banking situation.

The institutions which under the ninety day clause halted payments on savings accounts were the Tremont Trust Company, the Fidelity Trust Company and the Dorchester Trust Company.

They took such action after they had been subjected to unusually heavy withdrawals by depositors, made apprehensive by the recent closing of the Hanover, Prudential and Cosmopolitan Trust Companies.

Open Letter to the People

FROM

Simon Swig, Vice-President of the

Tremont Trust Company

I have always been frank with you. I shall be frank now. We had a big run Saturday. I shall not now take the time to tell you who was responsible for the propaganda that caused the run, except to say, that it was no friend of ours and no friend of yours. Some day I will tell you the whole story, and it will be an interesting story.

We did what no bank ever before did. We kept open from nine in the morning till eleven at night to pay every man, woman and child who called for their money. We wanted no one to be uneasy over Sunday.

Other banks closed at noon, as is customary on Saturdays, but we kept open the entire day and night, and demonstrated that our bank is one of the strongest and most liquid banks in Boston, as reference to the Bank Commissioner will demonstrate.

A bank to pay interest to depositors must invest a certain part of its deposits, and it is not always possible or convenient to turn the investments into hard cash at a moment's notice, and the time comes, if a run is persistent, when the ready cash runs out, and then the bank is hurt, but not hurt half as bad as the people, who among other things lose their interest.

We are ready to meet all comers today as we were Saturday, but the wise depositor, the cool and sane depositor, will recognize the have a run does and will stay at home and at his work, content in the knowledge that his money is safe and that this bank, which is a people's bank, will continue to do business at the same old stand, today, tomorrow and many tomorrows to come.

CROWDS AT BANKS CAUSE ENFORCEMENT OF 90-DAY CLAUSE

TREMONT AND FIDELITY HOLD UP PAYMENTS TEMPORARILY

Present at the Governor's conference to find a remedy for the financial difficulties of Boston banks were Commissioner Allen, State Treasurer Jackson and former Attorney-General Wyman, who has acted as Commissioner Allen's attorney. It was stated that the conference was to find some way to induce Bay State banks to co-operate to restore public confidence in trust companies and stop the heavy withdrawals which are shaking credit.

TO PROTECT DEPOSITORS.

Officials of the Tremont, Fidelity and Dorchester Trust Companies declared in halting withdrawals in savings deposits that their institutions were sound and that they acted to protect depositors from their own excitability.

Under the ninety-day clause savings depositors must give that much notice before getting funds. At the Tremont Trust Company it was indicated the ban might be removed within a few days if the people showed a return to reason.

Following the stopping of payments, a heavy police guard was thrown around the banking district. There were 100 officers on duty. The crowds lingered, but were not disorderly.

These crowds had gathered in force long before opening hour at the Tremont Trust Company in Court street and its branch in Warren street, Roxbury; the Fidelity Trust Company in State street and its Washington street branch and the Dorchester Trust Company at Uphams Corner and its Fields Corner branch.

SWIG FIRST TO ACT.

The Tremont Trust Company was the first to refuse payments, under the ninety-day clause. Officials of the company had first pleaded with the people to return to their homes, and not give way to foolish fears.

Following the closing of the paying tellers' windows in the savings department of the bank Vice-President Simon Swig issued the following statement:

"We were ready with cash to meet all depositors, but the crowd of sightseers and curiosity seekers which gathered interfered so much with our efforts to care for our depositors that for the protection of life and limb it became necessary to invoke the law of Section 7, Chapter 520, Acts of 1908, which requires ninety days notice for savings withdrawals. This ban will be removed as soon as the public calms itself, other than requiring this notice in the savings department, our business will go on as usual."

Edwin T. McKnight, president of the State Senate and vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, made the following statement on the stopping of withdrawals for his institution:

MUSTN'T LOSE HEADS.

"Our bank is sound. We are able to meet all demands. But this hysteria is wrong. There is no need for the people to lose their heads because several trust companies have been closed. Not that is what they have done. Their deposits are safe. We are acting in their interest."

President Herbert A. Rhoades made the announcement for the directors of the Dorchester Trust Company at the Upham's Corner office. The gonfers are a subsidiary of the Fidelity and Mr. McKnight is a director.

Mr. Rhoades did not order payments stopped until an hour after opening time. Long lines of depositors stretched into the street. The lines constantly increased, both at the Upham's Corner and Fields Corner offices, and for a time money was being paid out from nine windows by tellers and other officials.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS LIQUID.

The moratorium, or the Ninety Day Clause, does not affect checking accounts or other commercial business, according to attaches of the Bank Commissioner's office. Only savings accounts are involved.

Crowds collected outside the Tremont Trust Company office in Court street before 8 o'clock. There was continual fighting for position. Women fainted. Lines of them extended from the bank through Court street and Franklin avenue to Cornhill, and in the other direction up Court street to Tremont row.

Mounted police tried to keep a lane for street traffic through the crowds. Four officers were on duty at the doors. A score of police in plain clothes circulated among the crowds looking for pickpockets.

FAILED TO CALM CROWD.

When the bank was finally opened there was a rush for the doors, but only a dozen were admitted. Mr. Swig and Thomas J. Boynton, former United States district attorney and an official of the company, addressed the people. Their remarks were without effect. Then payments were stopped.

The crowd refused to leave the vicinity of the Tremont Trust Company, although the throng outside the premises of the Fidelity Trust Company called rapidly after payments were stopped. A big detail of police kept the people moving on Court street, and only those who had money to deposit or commercial business to transact were allowed to enter the Tremont Trust.

Those depositors who wished to open slips applying for withdrawals in ninety days were herded into a line extending down Court street and around Franklin avenue. At frequent intervals Simon Swig and other bank officials exhorted the crowd to have faith and go home. Occasionally announcement was made that large deposits were being brought in. Mr. Swig declared he would rather lose his life than lose a nickel of the people's money.

ASK PEOPLE TO MEET.

Fliers were distributed urging the public to go to Faneuil Hall at two o'clock, where they would be told the truth of the banking situation. Speakers were announced as Dr. Charles Fleischer, Simon Swig and John P. Feeney, counsel for the Tremont Trust Company and one of the vice-presidents.

At the Fidelity Trust Company speeches were not necessary as there were only about 150 in line.

The assets of the Savings Department of the Tremont Trust Company as reported to the Bank Commissioner September 8 were $12,403,405.60 and of the Savings Department of the Fidelity Trust Company on the same day $5,696,758.25.

At the South Boston Savings Bank and the South Boston Trust Company, subsidiary branches of the Fidelity Trust Company, the situation was quiet. A few depositors who appeared at both institutions to withdraw funds, most of them women, were assured by bank officials that there was no danger and that the funds at disposal were ample to meet all claims.

MUST DROP McCALL.

Several more "inactive" officials connected with Boston banking institutions are likely to be dropped from their payrolls, it was learned today, following the order of Commissioner Allen that the Old South Trust Company dispense with the services of former Governor Samuel W. McCall.

Mr. McCall, who was appointed chairman of the Old South's board of directors shortly before the bank reopened on July 19, receives a salary of $5,000 for his services with that institution.

Bank Commissioner Allen's request that Mr. McCall be dropped, it says, was prompted by the belief that the funds of the public should not be used by banking institutions to purchase the names of distinguished men as officials.

The order for Mr. McCall's dismissal was interpreted today by banking officials as a hint to reduce expenditures by releasing officials holding positions similar to that of the former governor. Unless the hint is taken it was intimated that further orders like that affecting the Old South Trust Company would be issued shortly.

CLAIM ORDER UNFAIR.

Objection to invoking the ninety-day clause was mainly raised by officials of the sounder banks on the grounds that it was unfair to punish their banks in order to save the weak.

The principal objection to the moratorium was that it would effect the commercial deposits in the banks invoking this measure. Commercial depositors, it was pointed out, would keep their checking accounts as low as possible in order to keep the money free from possible restrictions.

Rush of Depositors to Tremont Branch

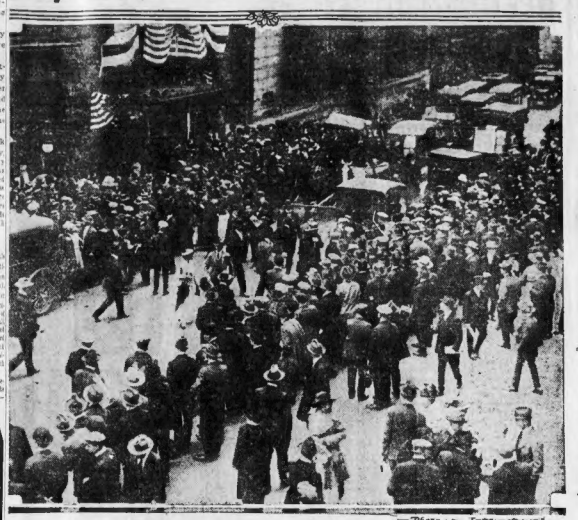
The Roxbury branch of the Tremont Trust Company at Glenwood and Warren streets, Roxbury, was besieged by depositors today.

The bank doors did not open at the appointed hour, 9 o'clock, although many of the depositors gathered at 8 o'clock and formed a line. At 9:15 o'clock the crowd swelled and a policeman from the Dudley Street Station arrived and formed a double line of depositors extending up Glenwood street.

Another line was formed on Warren street. The depositors, men and women, young and old, had their passbooks in their hands.

It was arranged by the officials inside to allow three or four inside at a time. Some of the elderly women who had been waiting in line were so fatigued they sat on the curbing. One elderly woman started crying, but friends told her not to worry. The bank was safe, they said.

To the crowd friends of the bank circulated, telling the crowd that the bank was in good condition and that everything would come out all right.



A large crowd, drawn by curiosity, added to the congestion around the bank today.

CONDEMNS COST OF RECEIVERS

Three Not Needed for Rhode Island Company, Says Providence Judge

Providence, Sept. 27.—Refusing demands of $10,000 each by Mark H. Swan, Theodore Francis Green and Zenas W. Bliss, receivers of the Rhode Island Company, for seven months' work, Judge Barrows, in the Superior Court today, criticized the appointment of the three men.

"There is no use in deceiving ourselves," said he. "Why not get down to bed rock. It wasn't because you needed three receivers but because there was a lot of pulling and hauling, and so three were appointed."

Clifford H. Whipple, representing the receivers, pointed out that the receivership for the Bay State Street Railway Company was paid at the rate of $15,000 a year. The regular rate is $1,000 a month.

TWO ALLEGED JEWEL THIEVES ARE HELD

James Cannon, alias John F. Cameron of Coleman street, Dorchester, and Max Kramer, alias Frank Ross, of Quincy street, Roxbury, were arraigned in East Boston Court today, charged with breaking and entering the home of Edward J. Thornton, No. 758 Saratoga street, and larceny of $322.50 worth of jewelry. They also were charged with having burglar's tools, and Kramer was charged with carrying a loaded revolver. Both pleaded not guilty and were held until Saturday in $3,000 each.

BOSTON TEACHERS TO RESUME CLUB MEETINGS

The Boston Teachers' Club will hold the first meeting of the season at the Twentieth Century Club, No. 8 Joy street, Thursday, September 30, at 4:30. After a short business meeting, vocal selections will be given by Miss Baldwin's class in vocal culture. Refreshments will be served. Miss Annie Scollard, the president, will conduct the meeting.

MALICE CHARGED BY FRENCH

President of Tremont Trust Says Hostile Interests Are Causing Trouble

Asa P. French, former United States District Attorney and now president of the Tremont Trust Company, today charged that the rumors which resulted in the heavy withdrawals from that bank originated with hostile banking interests.

"I feel absolutely certain that the sources of most of these rumors concerning the Tremont Trust Company were hostile, and many of them malicious," he said. "They must have been, for the rumors were entirely without foundation."

Rumors concerning the Tremont Trust Company have been current in Boston for several days. These have frequently been attributed to disapproval by old line banks to the Tremont Trust Company's policy of paying 5 per cent. interest on savings deposits with computation monthly.

Many of them have followed that institution's lead in increasing interest rates, reluctantly or otherwise, but the activity of the Tremont Trust is known to have been displeasing to certain financial interests.

OTHER BANKS MENTIONED.

The rumors gained momentum with the closing of the Hanover Trust Company. Although other banks were named in these vague and unreasonable reports, always the Tremont Trust Company was the chief one.

A few hours after the closing of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company on Saturday, a line of depositors, anxious to withdraw their money, began to form at the doors of the Tremont Trust Company on Court street.

It remained for Mr. French to attack the source of these rumors today.

"I expect the present feeling of uncertainty and lack of confidence to blow over," he said. "When public confidence is restored, our bank will resume payments in the normal way."

Other bank officials are known to hold similar views to those of Mr. French as to the origin of the rumors which compelled the Tremont Trust Company to fall back on the ninety-day notice plan.

SHARING THEIR EARNINGS.

"Certain Boston banks desire to keep returns to their depositors less than they ought to be under present conditions," said one bank official.

"The banks are making larger profits than in normal times.

"It was apparently the desire of the Tremont Trust Company to give its customers a fair share of that increased earning.

"It was the pioneer in the movement and the large increase in its deposits apparently indicated that the public appreciated the effort being made in its behalf."

IS MARRIAGE A SUCCESS? ARTIST CHRISTY BELIEVES IT IS

DIVORCED, HE TRIED AGAIN

People Who Do Not Wed Live One-Sided Lives, Is His Conviction

Today Howard Chandler Christy, the famous artist, submits his views, based on his own marriage experiences, and you may also care to exchange views for the opinions of readers submitted to The American in the discussion of this all-absorbing problem.

Mr. Christy has the discerning viewpoint of one who has been married twice himself. He was divorced from the first Christy Girl in the Spring of 1919, after a long period of differences threshed out in the Ohio courts. A year ago this month he married Mrs. Nancy May Palmer, after an acquaintance of eight years. He calls her the "prettiest woman in America." She had posed for his most effective war posters, and her beautiful face, became familiar to the public in every drive for war funds. The first Mrs. Christy was Miss Mabelle Thompson. He married her after his return from the Spanish-American war. They have a daughter, Nathalie, who is a senior at Smith College.*

BY HOWARD CHANDLER CHRISTY

Marriage certainly can't be a failure or we wouldn't be here to talk about it. Our ancestors, in their quiet and sensible way, fixed that thing up a long time ago.

The men or women who don't marry live one-sided lives. They are developed and warped in one way or another. Just watch the men about you. You can tell in the most casual glance whether they are married or not. When you see them eating you can spot the married man in one instant, for that the unmarried man has really bad table manners. But he hasn't adjusted himself to the niceties which he would have had under the training of a woman who cared about him.

MARRIED MAN THE HAPPIEST.

Sometimes I look around at the bachelors I know. When they reach forty or more they are said to marry. They have wasted their youth and lost the chief thing which would have made their lives full and happy.

I have been married and I have lived ten years alone and I say from my own experience and from the experience of all my friends that the married man is the happiest, the most progressive and the least selfish. You are ordinarily liable to fall into a terrible groove. Your wife jerks you out of it. She keeps you awake. You can't get narrow, or selfish or lopsided. A man needs a woman for training and a woman's care and the responsibility and joy, in turn, of rearing her happy and her life complete.

A POOR PICKER.

The other day I read in the newspapers of a man that said he couldn't possibly live with one woman more than seven years. He assumed that no one could and frankly said so. He was a poor picker, that's all, and it was as much his fault as the woman's. If he couldn't keep her interested so that she would develop in the seven years to the extent to which he presumes he has developed, he was a failure as a husband.

Some speak of a so-called "modern" marriage where husband and wife live apart and treat each other as if they were just jolly friends. It seems to me as if such people were really afraid to stand the test of real marriage and use this means to cloak their own ineffectuality as husband and wife.

Why don't they take the dare and face it out as every real man and woman has done before them?

HIS DEFENSE OF DIVORCE.

About divorces—the increase in their number is no longer looked upon as a startling or a shameful thing. What could be more shameless or more indecent than two people living together who did not love each other or who did not wish to be kept to the bond? No contract is worth anything unless you are in sympathy with the person or thing with which you made it. Marriage is a contract, the most important one made, and when it loses its meaning, it is worthless.

Marriage is the solution of social life. In practically every case where a person hasn't married that person regrets it when they are getting piled up on him or her and there are no family ties to make them feel a cozy and comfortable unit of mortal life.

My dear friend, the late Charles Frohman, knew that he made the mistake in never marrying. On many occasions he spoke to me of the one big thing he had missed from life. He regretted it. An artist and genius in his line, he had left no wife or family who should have been integral parts of himself. He was unhappy.

Marriage is necessary. It stands as the one final test of civilization which has raised us from the brute to the human being who can merge his life with another's for the well being of both.

IS AWAITING EXPERIENCE.

To the Marriage Editor:

As a constant reader of your paper, I notice your "Marriage a Success?" offering to all an outlet for their various opinions. This week will no doubt bring forth a solution from every side. Experience will predominate in most cases, but I am not married. I cannot enter upon that question; but hope when it comes my turn to be able to satisfy myself on that score before I take a step in that direction.

R. F. D., Back Bay.

SOME NEEDED QUALITIES.

To the Marriage Editor:

Marriage is a success on condition the pair marry at the same age, have equal social position, even disposition, piety, honesty, faithfulness and forgiving natures.

J. J. K., Boston.

HIS HOME WAS BROKEN.

Editor, Marriage Problem:

I, myself, but a young man of twenty-seven years, feel as though my whole life were spoiled, for the reason that my first venture in matrimonial life was very unsuccessful. I am a man of good character and clean habits and make very good wages as a mechanic in the shipbuilding industry. My wages for the past three years have never been lower than $65, and have ranged up to $85 and $90 a week. I have kept my wife in a state of luxury during the time she has been with me. She has left me four times within three years and I have taken her back four times. I have given in welcome to her in every way possible, but to no avail.

I like to go to dances once or twice a week, but my wife is simply crazy for dancing. I attribute my unsuccessful matrimonial adventure to that one subject, because I would not allow her to go every night in the week to different dance halls, she was not satisfied.

A married woman's place is at home, to share the features of the day with her husband. Marriage is a sacred duty to which no man or woman has a right unless he or she knows that he or she can uphold its dignity.

Los Angeles, Sept. 27.—Captain William N. Barrett, wanted in London on charges of embezzling a valuable necklace from Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr., was still being searched for by Federal and city police officers today.

Barrett was located here the first part of last week and kept under police surveillance for thirty-six hours, but owing to lack of an official request for his arrest the police watch over his movements was removed.

On Saturday a Federal warrant was issued at the request of the British ambassador in Washington, but in the meantime Captain Barrett had disappeared and none of the dashing aviator's friends is able to tell of his whereabouts.

The warrant granted by United States Commissioner Long for Barrett's arrest and extradition to England was requested by the British government. It was charged he had embezzled a necklace from Mrs. John D. Spreckels, Jr. The value of the necklace was placed at £16,500 sterling. This would make the necklace worth approximately $80,000, although previous dispatches had placed its value at a much higher figure.

PRIEST ASSAILS REV. DR. MYERS

Rev. Thomas O'Donnell Calls Boston Home of the Sinn Fein Movement

Rev. Thomas O'Donnell of Tasmania, told an audience of Irish sympathizers in Faneuil Hall that Powers Washington was the first Sinn Feiner, and that Boston really was the home of the Sinn Fein movement.

"Sinn Fein means the government of the people chosen by the people," he declared. "It means what the fathers of this country fought for in 1776.

"The Washington of today is Eamon de Valera. This hall is the birthplace of the Sinn Fein ideas. What the Irish want is what you have established here."

Rev. Father O'Donnell has been prominent in the Irish movement for some time, and was arrested for such activity when he recently returned to Ireland from Tasmania.

"THEY ARE PRO-BRITISH."

The clergyman bitterly scored the Loyal Coalition and Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers for their attacks on the Irish-for-Ireland movement.

"The Loyal Coalition sneers at Irishmen as hyphenated," he said. "They are not hyphenated themselves. They are pure British.

"Such a man as Cortland Myers desecrates the name of Christianity. His stand is that Lord Mayor Mac-Swiney should be allowed to die. It is almost incredible that such a traitorous counsel should be given in Boston, shrine of freedom.

"One man such as Councillor Brickley, who was wounded eleven times fighting for his country, is worth 60,000 such as that miserable creature in his temple."

Referring to Boston as the birthplace of the American Revolution and the idea of republican freedom throughout the world, Rev. Fr. O'Donnell expressed surprise to find the city "filled with British propaganda."

"POLLUTED WITH PROPAGANDA."

"What are you doing to preserve your liberties?" he asked. "You are being told to forget the work of British tyrants and their hired murderers. Every one of your institutions is polluted with British propaganda. It is time you hung out a new lantern to start the fight for freedom."

The speaker said President Wilson was made the victim of French and British diplomatic intrigue at Versailles and Paris. He drew a sharp distinction throughout his speech between the English people and "Lloyd George and his governing crowd politicians."

The meeting was under the auspices of the physicians, dentists and surgeons' committee of the Friends of Irish Freedom.

SEEKS $62,000 'SPIRIT GIFT'

Dr. Hubbell Says "Message" from the Late Clara Barton Was Not Carried Out

Washington, Sept. 27.—Making the astounding charge that through Spiritualistic messages alleged to come from the late Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross, he was induced to turn over $62,000 to Mrs. Mabelle Rawson Hirons, Dr. James B. Hubbell has instituted legal action for the return of his property. The plaintiff was secretary to Miss Barton for thirty years and the defendant his life-long friend.

In his bill of complaint filed in the Montgomery County Court at Rockville, Md., Dr. Hubbell asserts that when Miss Barton died in 1912, he owned real estate valued at $50,000, costly household furniture and a claim for $5,000 against the town of Glen Echo, as well as other property. It was the plaintiff's desire, he said, to establish a memorial for Miss Barton.

WENT INTO A TRANCE.

Mrs. Hirons, the plaintiff alleges, visited him in May, 1911, and expressed great interest in his project. On this occasion, Dr. Hubbell states, the defendant simulated a trance, during which she pretended to be in communication with the spirit of the deceased founder of the Red Cross.

According to the complaint, Mrs. Hirons alleged that Miss Barton directed her to tell Dr. Hubbell she (the defendant) had come to help carry out his plan and that he should turn over all his property to her.

Dr. Hubbell, the petition states, was much affected and believing that it was possible for departed spirits to communicate with their earthly friends through certain persons known as mediums, conveyed the real estate to Mrs. Hirons together with $3,100 he had received under Miss Barton's will, $2,000 he borrowed from her and $4,100 in Glen Echo bonds, all of which were to be used in furtherance of the memorial.

RESTRAINS MRS. HIRONS.

Sixty days ago, Dr. Hubbell alleges, he heard Mrs. Hirons say to a neighbor that she had given up all thought of a memorial to Clara Barton, and that she was not worthy of it.

So shocked and upset was Dr. Hubbell, according to the bill, that he was unable for a time to collect the data necessary for the suit which he is now bringe.

Judge Edward C. Peter signed a temporary bill restraining Mrs. Hirons from disposing of any of the property mentioned in the bill.

To Start Move to Impeach Wilson

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—Indignation felt in Congress over President Wilson's flat defiance of the Jones shipping act will result in steps looking to the Executive's impeachment, according to Representative G. W. Edmonds of this city.

"We will impeach him at the earliest opportunity," Edmonds asserted, in making attack on the President for "continuance of the dictatorship established during the war."

The Merchant Marine Committee of the House, of which Edmonds is a member, yesterday completed its hearings in Washington and will begin executive sessions at once, it was announced. Then it will go to Congress with the various members of the committee so that each can hold a meeting some time before Congress reconvenes to take up the impeachment proceedings.

Representative Edmonds said he will be assisted to lay the impeachment measure before the House of Representatives the first thing when it reconvenes on the first Monday in December.

The act that has brought down the storm of indignation on the head of President Wilson was his notification to foreign governments that he did not propose enforcing the provisions of section 34 of the act, terminating existing treaties with foreign nations that are contrary to the provisions of the shipping act, which was enacted by congress and unanimously passed the American Merchant Marine.

Representative Edmonds said: "President Wilson has refused to carry out the provisions of this act and has passed himself above the law in so doing.

"Congress will have to take steps to get a man to his place who will follow the Constitution and the laws of the land of the nation. The dictatorship of the President will no longer be tolerated.

"The impeachment charges will be carefully considered by the committee before a report is placed before the House, but it is presumed that she did inasmuch as the vote was unanimous in the committee. He had started divorce proceedings against her, but they were dropped when she was divorced.

The police are endeavoring to learn from Mrs. Pettit whether she knew Hill at the rush New Yorker and whether or not he has been in California.

Denton is known to have had many women friends, and the case is somewhat similar to that of Minnie Elwell, case in New York.

Evidence bearing on the mysterious murder today declared that in shifting dirt in the cellar where Denton's body was found in a blanket, was buried and remained hidden for over two months, they made "some discovered of great value." The officers would not reveal the nature of the discoveries.

TRADE SIGNET BLUE.

Some of the late developments in the case are the discovery of Denton's automobile, which had been turned into a service station, and the finding of a brass ring with an initial of D which was in a jeweler's by James C. Crowhurst who identified the "D" removed and "C" substituted.

Crowhurst is the plumber who was employed by Mrs. Pettit to repair the water heater in the cellar of the Denton residence and to whom Mrs. Pettit gave some of Denton's clothing to be disposed of. Crowhurst said he found the ring in a coat pocket and considering that he had fallen far enough for one initial placed upon it.

The County Grand Jury today started a session of the winter and it is understood that efforts will be made to indict Mrs. Pettit for two persons, a man and a woman.

ALIENS CLOG ALL LINES TO U. S.

Those Who Went Back to Europe After the War Eager to Return

New York, Sept. 27.—Once again a suffering, congested Europe is sending its peasantry to the United States. Not a record of accident nations is in existence which can tell a tale of such a flow of humanity.

From Italy is heard the report that no less than a million have booked passage for the "promised land." Wherever a liner docks peasants, burdened with striped baggage, wind their way into steerage. In every train are Greeks, Turks, Italians, Czechoslovaks, Irish and British—all hungering for a breath of native soil denied them. It is not what once it was over there. And they are coming back.

The tide of immigrants has swelled week by week until last week the rate by the Cunard company to Italy alone must pass became clogged and choked. Ellis Island was taxed to unload their human cargoes on the island at once.

Then the toll of a family of three, who came from Cracow, and presented themselves at the office of the six-year-old child. The child was born in a concentration camp, where the parents were held as "enemy Austrians."

He had never known the taste of milk, never known sugar," moaned the mother. He was a war baby, in the parlance of the days of hate. Last week the child died.

"He is free now, dead. They are free to do as they wish in the United States, but the parents feel that they walk into the new land at the expense of their child.

Commissioner Wallis today declared that the congestion at the gate was relieved, and the sunburned sons and daughters of old Europe were streaming through.

'Bleeding Bowl' Cuts Up Strange Antics

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 27.—"Blood!" whisper the superstitious. "Molasses," snort the scornful. The "bleeding bowl" continues its mysterious antics.

Hundreds of people, young and old, continue to flock to the quiet home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Horsman on Cross street where a red liquid has been leaking from a discarded sugar bowl through a seam along its side, where a handle was broken off long ago.

"Great minds as well as small minds are puzzled by the bleeding bowl," Mrs. Horsman said today. "Learned men and women have come to look at the bleeding bowl."

TABLES TIPPED IN WILD CHASE

Youth Races From Jewelry Store Through Cafe; Held on Suspicion

A wild chase today on Tremont street, during which patrons of a restaurant had their tables tipped over, ended when a youth who said he was Samuel Cotton of Leslie street, Mattapan, was cornered in the elevator of the Hotel Avery.

According to Charles Reagan, a former Boston policeman, now employed in the jewelry store of the Reagan Kipp Company, No. 162 Tremont street, Cotton tried to take jewelry worth $400. The police say this jewelry was found on him when he was arrested. However, he was booked as a suspicious person at the Lagrange street station.

Cotton entered the store and asked to see some diamond rings and platinum pendants. Reagan showed him some. Suddenly Cotton is said to have run out of the store. Reagan followed him shouting "Stop thief!"

Worming his way through the crowds on Tremont street, the fugitive ducked into Mason street, where he sought refuge in a restaurant. His entrance, closely followed by that of his pursuers, created a mild panic, in which tables and chairs were overturned.

Cotton dashed into the Hotel Avery, where he was arrested by Patrolmen Leonard and Downey of Station 4.

Country Needs Charity, Coolidge Tells I. O. O. F.

Governor greeting Henry V. Boorst of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows at the opening of the celebration today. Below, Mrs. Martha A. Prescott of Laconia, N. H., National president of the Rebekahs, welcoming Mrs. Hattie Whitalson, vice-president, from Washington.

Intolerance and selfishness are destructive of both public and private business and what the country needs most at this minute is "the cultivation of a charitable spirit," Governor Coolidge today declared in his speech of welcome to the national convention of Odd Fellows at the Copley-Plaza.

"We must have done with intolerance and selfishness," Governor Coolidge said. "These are the bane alike of public life and private business. What is it that distorts the true nobility of commerce and industry wherever it runs like a curse through any of the business life of the country? Selfishness. What is it that arouses the bitterness of party and factional animosities? Intolerance.

"We need to substitute for that vindictive spirit that is all to prevalent in American life the spirit of holy charity.

"Our public life is prone to be too vindictive. In to many cases it takes on the style of criminations and recriminations. There is no virtue in referring to political opponents as crooks and liars, or describing their policies as conspiracies against the public welfare, or making their motives subject only to sinister influences.

"Let a broad and all embracing charity require a candid and intelligent discussion of issues worthy of that reason with which man alone is endowed, rather than a pandering to base passion. Reason will make the final determination of all questions, why not appeal to it now?"

Alfred S. Pinkerton, past grand sire of the I. O. O. F., presided.

After signing the ode dedicated to the order and invocation by Chaplain J. A. Lucas of Illinois, the delegates sang one stanza o "America" and then as a compliment to the Canadians present sang the words of "God Save the King" for the second stanza.

The address of welcome in behalf of the city was delivered by Corporation Counsel Arthur D. Hill, substituting for Mayor Peters. Other speeches were made by Silas D. Reed, Grand Master; Herbert A. Holland, Grand Patriarch; Mrs. Heley A. Fisher, president of the Rebekah Assembly; Brigadier-General Herbert R. Bond, Department Commander P. M., and Grand Cyro Henry V. Borst. The exercises concluded with singing of the Star Spangled Banner and the Doxology and a benediction by Chaplain Lucas.

This afternoon the members of the Sovereign Grand Lodge and their wives were taken on a sightseeing tour through the park system to Lexington and Concord.

By tonight it is expected that 10,000 members of the order and of the Rebekah lodges will be here from all parts of the United States and Canada.

Immediately following the exercises at the Copley-Plaza, the opening of the annual session of the Association of Rebekah Assemblies, at which about 258 representatives from 50 assemblies in the United States attended, took place in Richards Hall, Huntington avenue.

After the seating of the officers of the association by past presidents and officers of the New Hampshire Rebekah Assembly, and the presentation of flags, greetings were made by Mrs. Helena E. Fisher, president of Massachusetts Rebekah Assembly, with response by Mrs. Martha A. Prescott, president of Association of Rebekah Assemblies. The business of the session then followed.

Tomorrow the biennial election of officers of the association takes place at the session to be held at 9:30 o'clock. The sessions will continue in the forenoon throughout the week, closing with the Friday session.

AUTO DEATH JURY DISAGREES

Fails to Report Verdict After 8½ Hours' Deliberation on Case of Molloy

After eight and one-half hours deliberation the jury in the case of Martin J. Molloy, twenty-two years old, of Norton street, Readville, charged with manslaughter, reported to Judge Hall of the criminal session of the Norfolk county superior court at Dedham today that they had been unable to reach an agreement and were discharged.

Molloy was driving an automobile on July 10 between Sharon and Stoughton when the car collided with a telephone pole, causing the deaths of George Mcllynn, sixteen years old of No. 5 Albemarle street, Readville, and Michael Mack of Blanchard street, Readville, who were passengers in the automobile.

Molloy was held on four counts, two of manslaughter, one of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor and reckless driving. His defence was that the accident was due to a blowout of a tire. He was represented by Attorney David W. Murray of Hyde Park. Assistant District Attorney Harold Williams conducted the case for the Government.

The case was given to the jury early today and at 7 p. m. that day they reported a hopeless disagreement. They were allowed to return to their homes and as there was no court Saturday the verdict was not reported until today.

The largest registration since Harvard opened her doors in 1636 was reported at the college today.

Indications at noon were that the figure would go well over the 6,000 mark, over 3,000 students having enrolled before that hour.

After formal registration, each class met in different rooms, following visits to the bursar, Charles F. Mason, whose office will collect over $300,000 in fees. This amount is made up of twenty-five per cent. of the tuition fees of each student, $50 of the yearly $200.

As has happened other years, freshmen in knickerbockers have been enrolled. Frederick Santee of Newcastle, Pennsylvania, is the youngest freshman on record, according to the college officials. He passed his fourteenth birthday, September 7. With him was Herbert B. Hofflert of Philadelphia fifteen years.

The two boys will live at No. 12 Farwell place since Harvard will not admit them to the freshman dormitories, as they are considered too young.

At the Graduate School of Education, the first two women to present themselves were Miss M. Neald of the University of London, and Miss Jessie Stern of Ridgwood, New Jersey. Corliss Lamont, son of T. W. Lamont, of the banking firm of Morgan & Co. of New York, was enrolled in the freshman class.

Prices realized on Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in the principal wholesale markets of the United States during August ranged from 14.50 cents to 30.00 cents per pound and averaged 20.37 cents per pound. Adv.

Brighton Boy Laments Skating Ban

Thomas A. Blake, who says he is nine years old and lives at No. 178 Brighton avenue, Allston, has sent a protest to the Boston American because he and his chums are not allowed to use their roller skates on the sidewalk.

"The cops in Allston and Brighton," his letter said, "won't let us kids skate on the sidewalk. Yesterday a cop swore at me and said if I wanted to skate, get out in the street and if he caught me again he would arrest me. My mother won't let me skate on the street because a little while ago a boy was killed by a truck.

"Every time a kid plays around here, somebody jumps on him."

12,000 Yards of Imported Fine Japanese Crepe

Piece Dyed Yarn Dyed

A Yard 29c 30 inches wide

A Rare Chance

Last week 5000 yards of this wonderful Japanese Crepe sold out in a few hours after we placed it on sale. This lot is the same quality, from the same manufacturer and part of the same lot that went so quickly before. Included in the lot are the most desirable shades.

During the war period when raw materials were scarce and production was of a war nature this Japanese Crepe fabric sold for more than twice this price. Now dressmakers and women who sew at home may secure this material and convert it into dainty Fall garments for themselves and the youngsters at about half the former price. A very unusual opportunity.

LEGION READY TO CHECK REDS, SAYS COMMANDER D'OLIER

By C. O. POWER.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 27.—Declaring the American Legion and the stand of ex-service men generally for law and order "is the greatest insurance policy our country could possibly have," Commander Franklin D'Olier today opened the second annual convention of the Legion here.

Cleveland is packed with members of the Legion and its auxiliaries and the city has taken on a martial aspect resembling war times. Many of the guests are wearing the khaki of firemens days.

"To the American Legion there is no East, or West, or North, or South, no Republican or Democrat," declared D'Olier. "It is the only organization that represents every good element in the entire country."

The commander outlined the work by officers during the year for the passage of measures of particular interest to service men, including compensation for injured and the so-called "four-fold optional plan."

FOR LAW AND ORDER.

"The greatest single service we have rendered our country was the virile stand for law and order," he declared. "We quickly served notice in no uncertain terms upon the wild radicals, who would attempt to injure the very institutions we had risked our lives to protect.

"We stated plainly we were ready for them and could meet their force with far greater force, sufficient to stop them instantly."

Massachusetts occupied a conspicuous place in the parade and was led by James T. Duane, commander of the State department. The boys from the old Bay State made a fine appearance. They seemed to be received with extra favor all along the route of parade.

While Colonel John F. J. Herbert of Worcester is the candidate of Massachusetts for national commander and has promises of support from thirteen other States, it must be born in mind that there are five other strong candidates for the place with active working organizations behind them.

TWO LITTLE ROWS.

The Massachusetts delegation had two fine little rows over the candidacy of Colonel Herbert. They were veritable teapot tempests. On the train going out there was an informal, impromptu caucus called by Roland H. Choate of Beverly for the purpose of allowing delegates "to get things out of their systems and off their chests."

It did, because a lot of oratory was spilled on the train that otherwise would have been poured out at the caucus here, when there was more than enough.

Delegate W. H. Root proved the bad boy of the party and gained for himself the title of the great objector. He objected to Colonel Herbert because he was a political candidate a year ago. He objected to Henry J. (Sailor) Ryan of Newton receiving endorsements for senior vice-commander because he has been speaking for the Republican national committee.

BAY STATE IS FIRM.

The train caucus amounted to nothing so far as definite action goes. The formal caucus spoke in no uncertain terms. It evidenced the fact that the Massachusetts Legion members do not intend to promote personal animosities nor to sentence a man to life banishment from Legion offices because he has been politically active.

Commander Duane presided over the hotel caucus and said that the Massachusetts delegation must smooth out its differences if it hoped to win respectable recognition for its candidates or its plans from the other States.

Delegate Maxwell of Somerville presented Colonel Herbert as the choice of Massachusetts for national commander in a nice little one-minute speech. Delegate Begley of Holyoke seconded the nomination in a clever two-minute talk. A storm of "second the nomination" followed.

OBJECTIONS TO HERBERT.

Root objected. Herbert, he said, had chosen the wrong road when he became a candidate for public office a year ago. He had tried to ride two horses at the Worcester convention. He had played politics at Springfield when he presented a resolution to thank the Congressmen who had voted for Legion legislation. If the delegation indorsed Herbert, he said, he would fight and vote against him and threatened to go to every State delegation and protest the candidacy.

Ryan of Newton stated frankly that the kind of opposition that had developed against Herbert had swung him around to his side. His legion and not his political record was all that should be considered.

Alden B. Chambers of Winthrop, a national vice-commander, notified the delegation that his position entitled him to vote in the convention and he asked that Chairman Duane cast it for Herbert. He brought the message that twelve States had told him they would back any man Massachusetts unitedly supported.

Chairman Duane gave the information that Indiana had sent word to him that it would support the Massachusetts man.

HOW THE VOTE STOOD.

The result of the roll call was fifty-one for indorsement and four against. Root asked that the vote be dissected. Despite objection this was done, the showing being thirty-eight delegates voting for Herbert and four against and thirteen alternates voting for him and none against. Those who opposed him were Root; William G. C. Simkins of Malden; Frank P. Putnam of Boston and J. C. Rosenfeld of Pittsfield.

It was later announced that the four had decided not to make active opposition to Herbert and to allow the majority will to cast the entire sixty-four votes of the State for the Worcester colonel to prevail.

Delegate Hickey of Lynn spoke for "Sailor" Ryan as vice-commander. Adjutant Leo A. Spillane said some kind words about Ryan and his legion activities.

When the vote was taken on the indorsement there was not a sound in opposition.

BAY STATE ON COMMITTEES.

Massachusetts will be represented on the various convention committees as follows: military affairs, James T. Duane; permanent organization, John S. Begley of Holyoke; constitutional amendments, William H. Root of Haverhill; resolutions, Roland H. Choate of Haverhill; legislation, John P. Holland of East Boston; war risk insurance, vocational training, public health service and hospitalization, Peter C. Borre of Boston; adjusted compensation, A. H. Matthews of Springfield; miscellaneous, James H. Flanagan of Jamaica Plain; Americanism, Henry J. Ryan of Newton; women's auxiliary, W. G. C. Simkins of Malden; publicity, Joseph W. McCarthy of Somerville; departmental organization, Leo A. Spillane of Chelsea; finances and dues, Alden G. Chambers of Winthrop; return of the dead from Europe, William McGuinness of Lawrence; credentials, Hugh H. Hickey of Lynn.

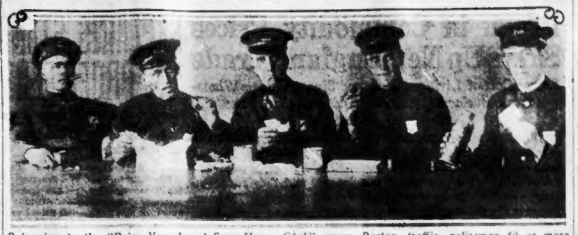
PoliceJoinLunch-From-HomeClub



Belonging to the "Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home Club" saves Boston traffic policemen 50 or more cents a meal. Seen in the photo are only a few of the squad who eat daily at Quincy Market headquarters. They are, left to right, W. T. Ellis, Warren H. Leise, G. F. Ryan, P. F. Concannon and John J. Gilmore.

Many Boston policemen, whose pocketbooks were hit hard by the exorbitant prices in local restaurants, have joined the Boston American's Bring-Your-Lunch-From-Home Club. Being out in the open most of the time policemen have hearty appetites. Cream puffs don't satisfy, so they carry big lunches from home and it costs them much less than they would pay for half the same quantity at the majority of Boston restaurants.

Why, we got so we couldn't look at a man-sized lunch under 75 or 80 cents," said one officer. "Now we are full-fledged members of the American's lunch-from-home-club and, believe me, it pays, both from the viewpoint of health and finance.

SAVE 50 OR MORE CENTS.

"For 20 or 25 cents we can carry a lunch that will beat anything that we could buy in a restaurant for three times that amount. Keep up the good work. Profiteering lunch pirates ought to be given a good lesson. The chain lunch-rooms are the worst. They more in proportion for their They charge more in proportion for their food than do some of the better class places."

It is now a common spectacle to see from twenty to thirty traffic policemen eating their lunches at one time in their headquarters at the Quincy Market building. Some of the regular lunch-from-home advocates who eat there daily are Sergeant Foley and officers W. T. Ellis, Warren H. Leise, E. F. Ryan, P. F. Concannon, John J. Gilmore and E. Magee.

PROGRESSIVE FIRMS AID.

Because of the excessive prices charged by the average Boston restaurant the establishment of lunch rooms and industrial restaurants by large manufacturing and business concerns is one of the most important features of their welfare work. Nearly every up-to-date concern in Greater Boston has either a lunch room or restaurant or both connected with their establishment.

Many of these places are enlarging their accommodations for lunching on account of the profiteering restaurant proprietors who have forced the officials of these business houses to protect their employes.

Ginn & Company has a model restaurant for employes at its publishing plant in Cambridge. Two hundred employes eat in the company restaurant daily. Seventy-five others carry their lunches and get hot soup, tea, coffee or milk from the restaurant, having in mind the State Board of Health advice to eat something hot with the noon-day meal.

GINN CO. MEAL 30 CENTS.

The food is served in the restaurant at cost plus the price of labor. An excellent regular meal is served for 30 cents each day consisting of a good sized order of soup, meat, potato and another vegetable, pie or pudding, tea, coffee or milk. Nothing but the best grade food is served. Mark R. Jewett is manager.

An interesting fact noted by managers of the various industrial restaurants is that their employes remain in much better health and do better work when they eat properly. By selling food at cost they improve the efficiency and morale of their employes, in addition to saving the workers a great deal of money.

GIRLS UNDER-NOURISHED.

As things are today hundreds of girls connected with concerns that do not have lunch-rooms or restaurants are under-nourished. With the meagre sum at their disposal they are unable to get sufficient food to properly nourish their bodies. This causes headaches, irritation and results in inferior work. In time the girls break down as their bodies cannot stand the strain.

Some of the firms in Greater Boston that are saving money for their employes by giving them food at cost or furnishing them with quarters in which to eat their lunches from home are Parbes Lithograph Manufacturing Co., Chelsea; Hood Rubber Co., Watertown; John Hancock Life Insurance Co., city; George E. Keith Co., South Boston; General Electric Co., Lynn; Converse Rubber Shoe Co., Malden, and John P. Squire Co., East Cambridge.

CHURCH BACKS LEAGUE—COX

Tells Nebraskans Big Religious Organizations Are Supporting Peace Pact

North Platte, Neb., Sept. 27.—Pacing eastward after 4,000 miles of campaigning in the West, Governor James M. Cox carried his League of Nations defense through Nebraska today, where large crowds are out to hear him. Stops at Kearney, Fremont, Omaha, Grand Island and Lincoln were on today's schedule, concluding with a mass meeting at Omaha tonight.

Governor Cox is pleading today the endorsements of the churches are for their recommendation for the League of Nations.

The Methodist Church at its last annual conference in Des Moines, the Baptist National Association at Washington, the Presbyterian general assembly at Philadelphia, the Congregational convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church at Detroit, the national council of the Congregational Church at Grand Rapids, the Unitarian General Conference at Baltimore—all unanimously approved our entry into the League together with the reservation or with only such reservations as would reassure our people and strengthen the moral influence of the United States," Governor Cox said.

Governor Cox cited the following statement of Pope Benedict in his last encyclical:

"Once the league among the nations is founded on the Christian law in all that regards justice and charity, the Church will surely not refuse its kind aid."

CAPTAIN HINES TAKES BRIDE

Y. D. Hero, Twice Decorated, Weds Miss Margaret Calvin of Cambridge

Boston newspapermen were much interested today in the wedding of Miss Margaret O'Connell Calvin of the Boston Post staff to Captain Paul H. Hines, Yankee division veteran, Democratic candidate for the House from South Boston and Boston newspaperman.

The ceremony was performed at St. John's Church, North Cambridge, by the pastor, the Rev. Fr. James F. Kelley. During the mass solos were rendered by Timony McCallahan, tenor.

The bride wore brown chiffon velvet carrying white roses and orchids and was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Calvin who wore blue chiffon and carried pink roses. The best man was George Hines, brother of the groom, who is assistant secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and also a former newspaperman.

The bride, whose home was at No. 80 Porter road, North Cambridge, was a daughter of the late C. Grinnell Calvin, formerly of the Boston American. Captain Hines served in France with the 101st Infantry and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre and two other citations. He was the first Boston man to be decorated on Boston Common after the armistice by General Clarence R. Edwards.

Break in Commodity Prices Slows Up New England Trade

Lower Cost of Living a Welcome Sign of More Wholesome Business Conditions; Industries Hit First Beginning to Recover

Finally the long-anticipated break in commodity prices seems definitely to have arrived. It comes as no surprise to New England manufacturers. Leading lines here—shoes, leather, woolen and cotton cloth—were "hit" early this Summer and they are beginning to recover. In many cases factories are resuming. However, the wave of price-slashing in other parts of the country cannot but tend to depress confidence here.

During the past week several of the largest manufacturers have announced reductions. Two big mail order houses in the Middle West cut prices right and left. Ford and Franklin automobiles have been reduced, and the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company announced a cut of at 1-3 per cent. in its cotton cloth prices.

Sentiment in New England business circles had materially improved with the advent of Fall, but wholesale reductions all over the country has put a damper on the revival. In addition, there have been thorny labor disputes in Lynn and Haverhill—shoe centres—which have added to the bad luck of the trade as a whole.

AMERICAN WOOLEN ATTACKED.

The Department of Justice in releasing its campaign against the American Woolen Co. on its "profiteering" charges, has not had a beneficial effect upon the woolen industry. When the government first attacked the monster woolen cloth producer earlier in the Summer, it was a warning to the trade that it meant to persist, whether the market had gone to pieces or not.

Likewise reports from London that the wool auctions there have undergone price recession has caused a wave of gloom along Summer street extension. There is no use denying that there is a tremendous glut of wool all over the world. The Western sheep raisers are in a serious plight, with this year's clip on their hands and no buyers. They have united in an effort to hold the staple for better prices.

CHEAPER SPRING CLOTHES.

But the price of raw wool is a negligible factor in the cost of clothing. A 70 per cent. cut in raw wool would hardly be noticed in the price factors to be reckoned. Accordingly of a suit of clothes. There are other materials and wages must be considered.

Other materials have dropped enough to warrant cheaper clothes next Spring, according to President Strauss of the National Association of Clothing Manufacturers, speaking at a recent convention of clothiers in Chicago. He looks for a cut of 20 or 25 per cent. in the cost of Spring clothing.

So far wages have not been reduced. The concerns that have led the way in slashing prices have stipulated that wages remain the same. But it is easy to see that if business picks up all over the country as it has been in New England, there is going to be many out of work. In that case wages will automatically seek their proper level.

READJUSTMENT INEVITABLE.

It is significant to note that with the exception of Lynn and Haverhill, strikes have been steadily declining. The state department of labor reports that in April there were sixty-seven strikes in Massachusetts; in May, sixty-seven; in June, seventy-five; July, twenty-six; August, fifteen, and up to September 15 only seven.

At the same time the demand for help at the employment agencies has fallen off and applications for jobs have increased. An interesting sidelight on the situation is the record number of recruits in the army in Boston in July and August.

There is considerable satisfaction for every one in the present readjustment of markets. It means that business is getting on a more wholesome basis. The wild orgy of spending is abating and thrift is getting to be the by-word.

It is unfortunate that in such an era as the present, some concerns that have over-extended themselves in stocking up at big, prices must suffer. Failures have been on the increase.

MONEY SITUATION HERE.

New England has been in a sounder condition from a monetary standpoint than most other Federal Reserve districts. The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston has managed to keep its reserve ratio comfortably above the mark that has been set as dangerous. It has been one of the few Federal Reserve Banks that has been able to lend money to districts not so well off. The biggest burden on the local institution will come when the cotton crop comes to hand.

The money stringency was the bane of business during the Summer. That and the transportation tie-up were the two chief factors in starting commodities on the toboggan. The "hunger strike" on the part of the public at large has had its effect.

But the money situation is improving with the contraction in business, and the railroad situation is considerably better. It must not be forgotten in the mists of gloom that the time for replacements of goods sold at sacrifices must eventually come. Once confidence has been restored, New England plants will again be humming.

U. S. OPPOSES MERGING OF FARM LOAN BODIES

By Universal Service.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Strong opposition to the organization of the 4,000 farm loan associations of the United States into one national organization with headquarters in Washington, is being shown by the Federal Farm Loan Board of the Treasury Department.

A controversy is now on between the board and the National Union of Farm Loan Associations over the fact that the association is making an annual charge of $10 to the farm loan associations desiring to join this organization. The Federal Farm Loan Board has notified farm loan associations throughout the country that no funds of the associations can be used for this purpose. The board has also declared that there is no authority in the farm loan act for such an organization.

TRADE COMMISSIONER COMING TO BOSTON

Paul P. Whitham, United States Trade Commissioner of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will be at the Boston office of the bureau in the Custom House October 6 to 8 for the purpose of conferring with New England merchants on the trade possibilities of China and other countries of the Far East.

Mr. Whitham has just returned from a tour of the Far East and will relate many stories and lantern slides of industrial centres over the Pacific. He has made a special study of transportation in the Far East.

He will speak before the Boston chapter of the American Institute of Banking at the City Club. Other organizations are planning to invite him as a speaker.

Houston Says Attitude in Refusing Loans to Gougers Misinterpreted

By Universal Service.

Washington, Sept. 27.—Secretary of the Treasury Houston has issued a statement explaining his attitude in opposing loans to parties intent upon holding commodities off the markets in the hope of higher profits. Some of his remarks, he says, have been misinterpreted. The Secretary's statement follows:

"I am in favor of every legitimate effort to promote orderly marketing of all commodities, but the government cannot be a party to an undertaking to hold commodities off the market, to enable the owners to maintain war prices or higher than war prices.

"As a matter of fact, the banks of the country during the last twelve months have been extending large credits to meet the demands from industry and agriculture.

"Since August, 1919, the loans and investments of about 800 reporting member banks increased over two and one-half billions of dollars. As these reporting banks represent about 40 per cent. of the resources of all banks, it is estimated that the total increase in loans and investments since August, 1919, has been over five and one-half billions of dollars.

"Even from January 23, 1920, when the increase in discount rates went into effect, to August 27, 1920, the loans of about 860 reporting member banks exclusive of loans secured by government obligations and other stocks and bonds, increased about one and a quarter billions of dollars.

"This would reflect a total increase of commercial loans in all banks, it is estimated, of perhaps three billion dollars."

America's Fisheries—An Undeveloped Industry of Great Possibilities

In its rich fisheries the United States possesses an undeveloped natural resource which needs only organization, capital and brains to make it one of the nation's greatest industries.

The American fisheries have hitherto been conducted so inefficiently that fish as an important food staple has failed to win the nation-wide popularity and market it deserves. So crude has been the organization of our fisheries, particularly as regards distribution, that fish in sufficient quantities and of good quality has been unobtainable regularly by much of our inland population.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries states that there is a huge unsatisfied demand for fish, especially in the Middle West and South. An enormously rich field awaits the wide-awake concern which enters the fish industry properly organized and equipped. In England, where twenty-five years ago the fisheries were in as chaotic a state as here now, more capital is profitably employed in the fisheries than in the American beef industry. The American beef supply is decreasing, and the consumption of fish will constantly grow.

The problems of handling and distributing fish and beef are identical, and progressive concerns are meeting them the right way, equipped with ample capital, fleets of steam trawlers, big central plants and excellent merchandising systems. All honor to these companies for their far-sighted progressiveness!

BOSTON GAMBLERS TAKE TO COVER IN BASEBALL SCANDAL PROBE

BETTORS DODGE ISSUE

Many Thousands Believed to Have Changed Hands Here on World's Series Games

Boston gamblers, fearful lest the United States Grand Jury take up the inquiry into the baseball corruption scandal of a year ago, are today moving heaven and earth to prevent their being involved.

The "big" gambler most prominently mentioned has been strangely missing from his accustomed haunts for several days now.

As the days go by more and more light is being thrown on the situation. Locally there are hundreds who know today that everything was not right, but not one is anxious to reveal his knowledge to a greater extent.

Men prominent in sporting circles and known to be close friends and confidants of Arnold Rothstein, the big New York gambler and race track owner, become more and more prominent as time elapses. These men, it is believed, profited to the extent of many thousands through their knowledge.

Johnson Has Taken Steps to Stop Gambling

Boston has long been a hotbed of baseball speculation. In fact, about the big league circuit it is commonly remarked that there are more smart baseball bettors in Boston than elsewhere in the country.

But it had never been supposed that there were any corruptionists here. In justice to a majority of the speculators it can be said that men of the type now under investigation are few and far between in local circles.

More than once Ban Johnson, acting for the National Commission and for his own league, has taken decisive steps to eliminate betting on baseball in this city.

From time to time he has retained the Pinkertons to bar known gamblers from the ball parks. At the time them secure evidence against gamblers and has had Thomas H. Lavelle prosecute these gamblers in the courts of Roxbury and Brighton.

The police have acted so far as it lay in their power, and during the present year both Captain Thomas H. Goode and Forrest F. Hall have had numerous prosecutions both at Fenway Park and Braves Field. In the big gamblers have escaped.

It is reported that some of the big the layers have boasted of their immunity from arrest. A protection agency has been at work in one of the parks all season.

How the Big Bettors Invaded This City

On the night before the first game of the last World's Series three men well known in sporting circles in New York, Boston, Palm Beach, Havana and Jamaica arrived in Boston. They traced their steps direct to the centre of betting activity.

"What's the price on Cicotte's first game?" was their opening question.

The odds quoted proving attractive, they placed all the money local speculators cared to lay against. They followed this procedure all over the city. Cicotte disposed of, they started over again.

"What's the price on Williams' first game?" came the query.

They repeated their activities of the original instance. In each case they specified the first game either of the two White Sox pitchers should twirl. That was all they were interested in.

The impression persists that the fixing was confined to including these first two games. Later it may have been added to, but in Boston it is thought that only the first two starts of the hurlers named meant anything.

Scandal May Involve All Major League Clubs

Chicago, Sept. 27.—John A. Heydler, president of the National Baseball Commission, declared today that he is prepared to go before the Grand Jury investigating baseball crookedness when it reconvenes.

Heydler held a number of conferences with officials of the Chicago clubs relative to the baseball scandal, but declined to give out any information.

It was indicated the scope of the inquiry would be widened and that Grand Jury investigations would be opened in every city in the country where the major leagues play. It was said evidence has been disclosed in the Chicago investigation that involves players in practically every one of the eastern major league clubs.

Henry H. Brigham, foreman of the Grand Jury investigating the baseball as applied to the White Sox and Cubs, admits fresh evidence involving the other clubs in the major leagues would probably make a separate investigation necessary after the present one has been disposed of.

"By the time we have unfolded all the new evidence we have," he said, "we will have developed enough scandal to start separate investigations throughout the country. We will make no recommendation as to the conduct of baseball or attempt to regulate the players for the club managements. That is for them to do. Their interests are with clean baseball. They know it and are as anxious as we are to clear up the game. The bad players will be weeded out and the game will survive."

Indictments against gamblers who are charged with conspiring with certain players to "throw" games will probably be returned by the Grand Jury this week.

CONVINCED OF CROOKEDNESS.

M. A. Replogle, assistant State's attorney in charge of the Grand Jury investigation, predicted today it would be a month before the investigation can be completed. He said he attended yesterday's game between the Chicago White Sox and Detroit and found nothing to substantiate a rumor that the Sox would throw the game to permit Cleveland to win the pennant. The White Sox won and fought hard throughout the game.

President Heydler verified and amplified the admission made by Charles A. Comiskey, the owner of the White Sox, who said that he was convinced that some one had "fixed" some of his players to throw the first game of the World's Series.

Comiskey took the matter up with Heydler on the morning of the second game, because he was not on speaking terms with Ban Johnson and Harry Herrman, chairman of the National Commission, who was also president of the Reds, the opposing team. He also called Heydler into a conference before the second game, more convinced than ever that some of his players were "fixed."

NEXT BIG HEARING TOMORROW.

This disclosure and a statement by Monte Tennes, prominent among the big bankers of Chicago, that he was ready and willing to go before the grand jury and tell anything he knew about betting on the 1919 World's Series were the important late developments.

It is certain that startling evidence will be produced when the hearing is resumed tomorrow.

President Johnson of the American League has returned to Chicago from New York where he had a conference with Arnold Rothstein, race track man and gambler, who was connected with rumors of fixing the World's Series. Rothstein, Johnson said, knew something about it.

"We defeated the White Sox fairly and squarely last year and I challenge anybody to prove otherwise. To clear up all of these reports regarding the fixing of certain members of the White Sox are pure bunk."

"I kept pretty good watch on things, as you might imagine, and I didn't see the least thing that appeared out of the way. This talk of throwing baseball games makes me tired. What is more, so far as I know there was very little betting here in the series.

Rothstein Said to Hold Key to Pennant Scandal

New York, Sept. 27.—"Arnold Rothstein, known as New York's biggest gambler, holds the key to the scandal which surrounded the world's series of '19," according to W. S. Farnsworth, sporting editor of the New York American.

According to the writer, Rothstein is in a position to clear up a great many of the misty affairs which have troubled baseball in past years. He can, for example, explain why Benny Kauff, an excellent player, was dropped from the Giants in the middle of last season.

Rothstein has been summoned to appear before the Chicago grand jury, but it is unlikely that he will appear. If, however, the matter is turned over to the Federal authorities Rothstein will be compelled to acknowledge a subpoena and tell what he knows.

According to a close friend of Rothstein's, Bill Burns, a former big league baseball player, approached Rothstein and offered to get the world series fixed for $100,000. Not long after Abe Attel, former featherweight champion, called him up about the same matter.

GARDNER IN GREAT SHAPE FOR MAT BOUT

Pinky Gardner, the crack middleweight wrestler, is red-hot after the championship of his class and figures that after he defeats Jimmie Sanders in the elimination match at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night he will be all set for a crack at the title.

Gardner displayed all his old-time form last week in handling Gehring, and while he figures that Sanders is a dangerous contender he feels that he will decisively dispose of him.

Bridson Green, the Tech instructor, will meet Joe Shaler in the semi-final, while Promoter Toohey will add a local pair for a curtain raiser.

The Black Ishmael

JACK JOHNSON has arrived at Leavenworth Prison to serve a sentence of a year and a day.

Look at this picture.

It shows Johnson as he was ten years ago when he defeated Jim Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world.

He was then thirty-two years old, a lean, powerful piece of humanity.

He used to laugh, and sing, and gleefully saw on the strings of an old bull fiddle in those days.

He had the mind and heart of a child. There was no innate wickedness in Johnson.

White men showered money on him. Attention and luxury turned his head. Then came his downfall, and years of wandering as a fugitive from the law.

Now, at forty-two years of age, Jack Johnson is back in his home town, but in prison.

Now he is a bulky colored man, his avocation gone.

What do you suppose Johnson would give to wipe out the past ten years, and be again as he was when this picture was taken?

"Pure Bunk," Is What Pat Moran Says of Charges

Cincinnati, Sept. 27. — Pat Moran, manager of the Reds, when asked about the alleged frame-up in the 1919 World's Series on the part of the White Sox said:

"We defeated the White Sox fairly and squarely last year and I challenge anybody to prove otherwise. To clear up all of these reports regarding the fixing of certain members of the White Sox are pure bunk."

"I kept pretty good watch on things, as you might imagine, and I didn't see the least thing that appeared out of the way. This talk of throwing baseball games makes me tired. What is more, so far as I know there was very little batting here in the series.

Brooklyn Holds Up End With Rival Shortstops

HOW THE SHORTSTOPS COMPARE

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

	Offensive	Defensive	Total
Brooklyn	792	268	1060
Cleveland	768	266	1034
Chicago	788	270	1058
TOTAL INFIELDS
Brooklyn	3327	1358	4685
(vs. Cleveland)
Cleveland	3312	1372	4684
Brooklyn	3382	1358	4740
(vs. White Sox)
White Sox	3457	1383	4840

Brooklyn holds its own fairly well in the dope on the short stops as compared with any one of the possible American League pennant winners, being slightly in the lead in the comparison with Cleveland and slightly behind the White Sox.

Olson, the man who has been abused more and who has suffered more criticism at the hands of the Brooklyn fans than any man in the country—the man who is supposed to be the weak spot in Robby's machine—seems to be quite a fair sort of a ball player when you tear his averages to pieces and analyze them. It is natural that the figures should show him a bit ahead of Cleveland, for the Indians lost one of the greatest in the game and were forced to fill in quickly. I am using the figures of Sewell entirely, with an amendment that Evans probably will hit for him at least once during the series and then play short himself, which he can do after a fashion.

This dope thing is getting to be work. I started to dope one club against another and promised to compile my figure after we have studied all the infields and give you a chance to see how they compare with yours. And here the race is still going on.

DODGER'S INFIELD STRONG.

Compared with the Cleveland infield the Dodgers lead by just one point. I rather expected they would show a bigger advantage in the attacking end of the game, but the dope proves that Brooklyn would hit better and be stronger in attack against Chicago than against Cleveland.

The White Sox infield holds a lead in the dope over the Dodger outfit but not enough to make any claims to outclassing them. In fact the figures are quite close for such a comparison. I am figuring confidently that Ronetchy will be in his best shape for the series.

That bad leg of his has a habit of slipping out of gear and a slip during the series would cut a lot off the Dodger attacking power.

Considering the shortstops, however, I am surprised to find how well Brooklyn rates.

Olson may not be a great player—in fact he has about as many faults as a major leaguer may have and stay on a team. He is not a base runner and he is liable to slip on easy chances. He is not a hard hitter, but a dangerous one. In fact, the thing that makes Olson stay in the big show is that he is a dangerous players in the country—always trying.

Compared with Risberg Olson shows very favorably. They work alike, excepting that Risberg is slightly superior physically and not up to Olson as a hustler or a thinker. Risberg played ball in the last world's series. His failure to make a double play in the first game—a double play that was simple and easy—probably lost the series for Chicago. It remains to be seen whether his bad work in important series is in the past article we will tackle the left fielders. The hitting power is concentrated in the outfields and the study of these three positions may change the dope materially.

MARTIN SURE OF WINNING GO

Cambridge Boy Confident of Defeating Brown at Triple A Show

By JACK CONWAY.

"I'll beat Brown at the Armory A's show at Mechanics Building tomorrow night merely as a part of my campaign to get a bout with Johnny Kilbane." Vincent (Pepper) Martin of Cambridge featherweight, made the statement just as light-hearted as ray any young stenographer ever grew morning to the boss as she stenoed into the office today.

You see Martin has got his heart set on securing a match with Kilbane and he doesn't intend to permit Brown or anybody else to disturb his plans.

"I can punch as hard as any featherweight in the world," continued Martin. "Last Winter and during the Spring I won eighteen of my bouts by knockouts. Not so bad eh? Brown is a mighty shifty boxer and a smart fighter when in the ring, but then it all kins the canvas if bumped with a wallop on the jaw with a right or left punch. I can hit, which fact is attested by my record. And my two years of amateur all count to ten.

Brown has already fought Kilbane once. The affair ended with honors even after six rounds of spirited mixing. He is due for another engagement with the title holder, but realizes that if he is to realize his ambition he must first dispose of Martin.

Walter Butler to Box Tommy Burns

Walter Butler of Revere will doing toes once more when he colgides with Dummy Burns of Brockton in a ten-round bout at the Casino of Lynn tonight. The tilt about the New England welterweight title has given Butler much interest in things pugilistic and he is planning to stage a sparkling come-back.

Abe Friedman sturdy Boston bantamweight entry, will get into action at Fall River tomorrow night when he meets Chick Hayes of Providence in a ten-round bout. These boys have already met twice, each boxer winning a decision.

On Wednesday Lt. Friedman will clash with Roy Moore at Rochester. He will then return to the home sector to prepare for a go with Johnny Krommer which will probably be staged by one of the local clubs the latter part of next month.

Terry Brooks Battles Young Gould

Terry Brooks threatens to upset Young Gould's run of victories. During the first five days of boxing under the new law, Gould stopped three opponents and he is now matched opposition when he mingles with Terry Brooks at the Commercial A. C's opening at the Grand Opera House Wednesday night. Young Gould and Eddie Murphy will clash in another eight-round affair, while Tommy McFarland will sling punches in the general direction of Mickey Donovan in the final number of ten rounds.

PENN CAPTAIN TO BE OUT OF LINEUP FOR WEEKS

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—"Bud" Hopper, captain of the Penn football team for three weeks at least as a result of an injury sustained in the game with Delaware Saturday at Franklin Field. At the start of the second half the brilliant end-and-line leader was "clipped" by Fred Harmer, of Delaware, and fell hard, dislocating his left arm at the elbow.

BUSY GOLF WEEK AROUND CITY

Something Going on Every Day on Links in the Metropolitan District

Some sort of competitive golf will be played in the Boston district every day this week.

The golfers who qualified Saturday in the first and second sixteens at the Oakley Country Club started to play in the first round of match play. The semi-finals and finals will be played tomorrow.

Today will see the return of Ted Ray, American open champion, and Harry Vardon, in the Brookline Country Club four-ball foursome matches against Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford.

Ouimet and Guilford defeated Ouimet and Guilford at Belmont, in July, they have played in all parts of the United States and wherever they have played with reverses, their showing has been worthy of the best of golfing efforts. Their foremost adventure since leaving Belmont was at the Ekwanok links, at Manchester, Vt., when the American open title was handed around in a most sensational manner by Jock Hutchison, Leo Diegel and Jock Hutchison.

Ray and Vardon can be depended on to try their hardest at the country club, for it was over that course that Ouimet defeated them in 1913, in a play-off for the American open championship. Ouimet and Guilford also take revenge for the beating they received at the hands of the British invaders.

The favored few who get inside the country club grounds will have a wonderful opportunity to witness the players, as the crowd will be confined to 1,500.

Wednesday is the day selected by the Massachusetts Golf Association for their annual championship meetings. The Commonwealth Country Club will supply the course and it is rumored that Jerry may put up as one of the prizes the first pair of armors he has won at Woodland Saturday, when he took the high honors in the second division. The event is open to members of the Automobile Association and their friends who by means of field will be on hand.

On Thursday a four-some event will be held at the Federal Country Club.

The week-end meetings of the Massachusetts Association will be held on Friday and Saturday at the Worcester and Salem Clubs. With the Wessachusetts, Brae Burn and Belmont clubs this week, and the Concord and Salem events afford an opportunity for the golfers to play over the best courses in the district without going many miles.

Jack Lowe of Woodland and Alex Pace Jack Lowe of Woodland.

Massachusetts should make New York's team look small when Jack Lowles Cup competition, which will be played at the Merion Cricket Club of Philadelphia, Oct. 7 and 8. Lowe bears the Bay State will enter nine event with the full strength.

The appearance of Jack Lowe, competitive golf in Boston was the awakening of golf that is at present at Woodland Mr. Lowe one of the most expert bridge players in the world, but his knowledge of the finesse at golf that he long has resulted in white engaged at the card table.

When he qualified in the first six at Woodland with a snappy 81, the friends said:

"What a lucky fellow Jack was to get a score that is the equivalent to bogey."

But when Jack won his first match from an eight handicap man and then carried a five handicap man to the seventh hole in the second round all agreed that Mr. Lowe had finally mastered the difficulties of the time-exacting game and that everybody should not ask his opponents to concede him strokes.

Mr. Lowe has said that he attributed his recent successes to the fact that he has been playing with better golfers than himself, including Francis Ouimet, Jesse Guilford, Dr. John Brooks, Fred Hill, Ted Ray, Harry Vardon and Gill Spargo.

The only regret Mr. Lowe has is that the season is so near the end that he will probably have to wait until next year to settle some old scores.

SCHOOL GRID TEAMS UPSET

Many Surprises in Opening Games of the Season—Big Week Ahead

Football came in the schoolboy ranks and given a fourth July in the games that were played Saturday in the various leagues. Teams that were figured to be easy for the big fellows were either beaten or was by a small margin.

The surprise of this was shown in the Cambridge Latin-Peabody High game that was started at Peabody, Saturday. Latin was picked to swamp Peabody. As it was Cambridge Latin was fortunate in emerging the winner, the score being 7 to 6. Peabody High's Dean by scoring Salsberg on a forward pass for goods in the South Shore league.

The Winthrop-Lynn Classical game was a big surprise in Lynn as the former, instead of winning Winthrop High's team is to be taken seriously as it showed a lot of class in the game. Lynn Classical has developed a team that will give the fans a good chance to see what Coach Mooney has developed. Lynn Classical has been playing three consecutive hard games and has come out of the field fast.

HELIOTROPE Stirring Serial of a Father's Sacrifice

"Heliotrope," from the story by Richard Washburn Child, is a Cosmopolitan production released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture.

Directed by Geo. D. Baker

By Jane McLean

Seven Tension Novelized.

WHILE Alice and Jimmie were perfecting plans for their wedding, Heliotrope Harry was watching the comings and goings of his ex-wife with an angry eye.

The disquieting information imparted by the landlady had served at first to make her more and more determined to remain hidden.

After all, she argued that the arrival of Harry and Spike might be a coincidence; but she could not rest with this specious reasoning. Shadows filled with sinister figures began to surround her at night; she lived in constant alarm, and yet she could not persuade herself to move again.

The landlady's curiosity had been aroused; she found time to call again on this strange woman to learn more if she could.

But Mrs. Hasdock herself took the role of questioner. "You gave me a start the other day," she said nonchalantly. "I thought I knew the man you were talking about, but I saw him yesterday and I was wrong."

Now Heliotrope Harry had not left his room, so the buxom lessee of the house knew Mrs. Hasdock was trying her out. She showed no surprise, merely nodding. "Oh, well, we're all likely to make mistakes."

Another Man

"You said there was another man with him, didn't you?"

"Sure, a friend—he goes to work early; nice quiet chap he is too."

"What time does he go usually?" asked Mrs. Hasdock.

"Gets up at seven. I guess he's a real worker all right; there's few enough of 'em these days."

"You're looking better," ventured the landlady after a pause; "perhaps you'll be able to come down to your meals soon. I've got a lot of real genteel people in my house."

But Mrs. Hasdock was in no mood to risk an appearance; she had learned that one of the best roomers went to work early; it would be easy enough to rise at seven, leave her door slightly ajar and see who this man was.

The following morning she put this suggestion into practice. With her eyes pressed against the door crack she watched trembling-ly the various boarders go down the stairs, breakfast-bound.

And then she closed the door with a shudder and almost fell into a chair. Spike Foley had walked carelessly past her. There was no longer any doubt that Heliotrope Harry was the other man. Mrs. Hasdock was consumed with a fever of terror. She felt that unti-ring eyes were watching her every move and instinctively she feared for her life.

Suppose her ex-husband were to meet her; she had nothing with which to defend herself. Her breakfast was brought, but she could not eat. Into her mind came the act idea that she needed a pistol. With such a weapon she would be able to protect herself. Much as she hated to go out she resolved to visit Mr. Simon.

Her ex-husband, calmly watching her, saw her go; he was down the three flights of steps with incredible speed and just turned the corner he slipped across the street.

Spoiling the Plot

A young lady dismissed the young man to whom she was engaged because he smoked. A few days after she had told him she would never speak to him again, a little boy brought a note from the wretched man which read thus: "Heartless, yet still beloved Fanny, my sufferings are more than I can bear. I cannot live without your love. I have, therefore, just taken poison, the effects of which I am already beginning to feel. When you read these lines I shall have joined the great, silent majority. Shed a silent tear over my tomb in remembrance of the days gone by. Your dead George."

When the young lady had finished reading the note, she asked the little boy who brought it what he was waiting for. "The gentleman told me to wait for an answer," was the reply.

Another Episode in "Heliotrope"

Mrs. Hasdock, sure that her ex-husband will try to harm her, goes to her old friend, Moe Simon, and buys a pistol, although he makes protest that she may get into trouble.

Mrs. Hasdock had hurried to the pawnbroker's, her eyes red-rimmed and tearful.

He was not surprised to see her enter Moe Simon's shop for Spike's first letter had warned him of the contact between the two. But what he beheld through the glass window gave a significance to her visit he had not dreamed of.

Mrs. Hasdock greeted Mr. Simon with an offhand air as though her call were of small importance, but the shrewd pawnbroker was not deceived. Restrained excitement was written in her eyes and in the nervous movements of her hand as she wiped her forehead.

"Try some to tell me it's all right?" he queried, peering at her across the counter.

In Difficulty

"No, Moe, the truth is I'm in a little difficulty."

"You want more money?" he shook his head. "Nothing doing, lady."

"Did I say anything about money —what's the matter with you?"

Mr. Simon was nonplussed; people in trouble always wanted money. Trouble always spelled money to him.

"Oh, advice—that's what you want. Shoot! I give you all of that free gratis, no interest even." He stuck his fat hands in the armholes of his vest and waited.

Mrs. Hasdock, nervously about before she went on—"I want to get a small pistol."

"A pistol! You want a pistol—what for?"

"Never mind what for; self-protection, that's all. I got a valuable secret and I got to have a little barker to help me keep it. I'm clear, ain't I?"

"See here"—Moe was looking forward—"you ain't planning to do no shooting, are you? That's a bad business, Jos. I don't want to be dragged into nothing like that. Respect the law's always been my motto—and besides, you ain't got no right to carry a gun without a permit."

"I'll take care of the permit, Moe. You let me have the gun—you got a nice collection of 'em right here. I'll pick out one—not a phony one, either—and I'll pay you over your ten per cent. I'll hand it back to you."

"Oh, no you won't!" Moe was very decided. "You're up to some devilitry and I can't be mixed up in it."

Scowled at Him

Mrs. Hasdock scowled at him. "Oh, you won't! Well, I know somewhere else I can get one. You're a fine friend, you are."

"You ain't going about it the right way," said Moe, adopting a more conciliatory attitude. "Of course it's nothing to me if you buy a gun so long as you tell me you got a right to buy one."

"Well, I have got a right—now you pick me a good one—one that'll speak straight if I ever have to use it."

"And you'll pay for it?"

"Yes, I'll pay, but if you was any kind of a man you'd give it to me."

"I'll let you have it half price," said Moe, leaning over to take a little revolver from the case.

"You see this—second hand, yes, but a beauty and a bargain; only $10 and cheap at twenty—hardly used at all."

"I got to pay, have I?" demanded the woman.

"Sure you got to pay—I got to be protected, ain't I?"

From his vantage point Heliotrope Harry saw his ex-wife pick up the pistol and examine it. Then he saw her lay a bill on the glass case and slip the weapon into her bag.

The Restless Sex

By Robert W. Chambers

"The Restless Sex," soon to be seen in all leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, featuring Marion Davies.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—Continued

"WELL, you went away. Has Stephanie told you how she and I met?"

"Yes."

"I thought she would tell you," he said tranquilly. "And has she told you about our unwise behavior—our informal comradeship —reckless escapades?"

"Yes."

Grismer raised his head and looked at him intently.

"And she has related the circumstances of our marriage?" he asked.

"Partly."

Grismer nodded.

"I mean in part. There were many things she refused to speak of, were there not?"

"Yes."

He slowly unclasped his linked fingers and leaned forward on the couch, groping for his pipe. When he found it he slowly knocked the cinders from the bowl, and laid it aside once more.

Cleland, I'll have to tell where I stood the day that my father — killed himself."

"What!"

Stephanie knew it. There had been a suit pending, threatening him. . . . For years the fear of such a thing had preyed on his mind. . . . I never dreamed there was any reason for him to be afraid. . . . But there was!"

He dropped his head and sat for a few moments thinking and playing with his empty pipe. Then:

"Stephanie's aunt was the Nemesis. She became obsessed with the belief that her nephew and later, Stephanie, had suffered wickedly through my father's conversion of trust funds." He swallowed hard and passed one hand over his eyes. "My father was a defaulter. . . . That woman's patience was infernal. She never ceased her investigations. She was implacable. And she—got him.

What Killed Him

"She was dying when the case was ready. Nobody knew she was mortally ill. . . . I supposed my father saw disgrace staring him in the face. . . . He made a last effort to see her. He did see her Stephanie was there. . . . Then he went away. . . . He had not been well. It was an overdose of morphine."

Grismer leaned forward, clasping his hands on his knees and fixing his eyes on space.

"The money that I inherited was considerable," he said in his soft, agreeable voice. "But after I had begun to amuse myself with it the papers in the suit were sent to me by that dead woman's attorneys. So," he said pleasantly, "I learned for the first time that the money belonged to Stephanie's estate. And, of course, I transferred it to her attorney at once. . . . She never told you anything of this?"

"No."

"No," said Grismer thoughtfully, "she couldn't have told you without laying bare my father's disgrace. But this is how I suddenly found myself on my uppers," he continued lightly. "Stephanie came to me in an agony of protest. She is a splendid girl, Cleland. She rather violently refused to touch a penny of the money.

"You should have heard what she said to her aunt's attorneys—who now represented her. Really, Cleland, there was the devil to pay. . . . But that was easy. I paid him. Naturally, I couldn't retain a penny. . . . So it lies there yet, accumulating interest, payable at any time to Stephanie's order But she'll never use it. . . . Nor shall I, Cleland. . . . God knows who'll get it—some charity, I hope. . . . After I step out, I think Stephanie will give it to some charity for the use of little children who have missed their childhood—children like herself, Cleland."

After a silence he idly struck a match, watched it burn out, dropped the cinder to the floor.

Desperately in Love

"There was no question of you at that time," said Grismer, lifting his eyes to Cleland's drawn face. "And I was very desperately in love . . . . There seemed to be hope that Stephanie cared for me. . . . Then came that reckless escapade at Albany, where she was recognized by some old friends of your father and by schoolmates of her own.

"Cleland, I would gladly have shot myself then, had that been any solution. But there seemed to be only one solution. . . . She has told you, I believe?"

"Yes."

Mrs. Solomon Says—

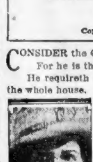
CONSIDER the Golfer, my Daughter.

For he is the Son of Joy, and the heart of his wife rejoiceth in him.

His required not to be awakened. but ariseth at dawn, and arouseth the whole house.



Mighty are his preparations, and there is much rushing about amongst the women to find his THINGS.

He swallowed his breakfast without complaint, and fortifieth himself at the font within his locker.

Optimism is his middle name; and in his bright lexicon there is no such word as "Rain!"

The mind of his wife is at peace: for she knoweth, where he IS all day; and in the evening he is weary, and goeth to sleep after dinner.

Whatsoever his wanderings, and however long his absence, she feeleth no jealousy. But saith, "Thank heaven, he is safe!"

His moods, his grouches, and his temperamentalism are known only to his God and his caddy; and, in the open, where it can do no harm, he bloweth off the carbon of his brain-storms.

The "touch of liver" knoweth him not, and dyspepsia is a stranger unto him.

The sun lighteth up his countenance, and his figure keepeth its beauty; embonpoint cometh not near him.

He lacketh but a topic for conversation, and concerning his score, the TRUTH is not in him.

He is happy in his folly, and weareth the smile that will not come off.

He preferreth a pleasant day unto a moonlight night, and a beautiful course unto a beautiful woman.

And a smile of approval from his caddy, he vndeth more thrilling than the smiles of blondes and of sirens.

Verily, verily, a little HOBBY is a wonderful thing.

For every man must have his folly, whereon he worketh off the original sin within him.

And some choose wine, and some tobacco, and some flirtation.

But the GOLFER exceedeth them all in wisdom!

Then, blessed be the driver, and the putter, and the mashie and the niblick, and the little white rubber ball!

For where Golf is, there is sweetness and light—and a good digestion.

And no man can be both a good golf player and a bad husband!

When Hearts Are Trumps

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER LXIV.

FREQUENTLY during the next hour Arthur Paige mentally reiterated his statement that he would rather be thrashed than go through the projected interview with John Brandon.

The shadow of the ordeal cast a work he had meant to attend to this morning. At last he decided to end the disconcerting anticipation, and instructed his stenographer to ring up Mr. Brandon and ask him if Mr. Paige could see him at his office some time today.

The answer was brief and to the point: Mr. Brandon would see Mr. Paige at 11.

Arthur had not expected the appointment would be as early as this, yet he hailed it eagerly.

"I can't breathe until I get the thing off my chest!" he muttered off his way to Brandon's office.

His friend's welcome hurt him. He felt as if he were about to wound some one who trusted him.

That was his first idea. But when he had seated himself opposite Brandon and had looked him in the face Arthur felt less conscience-stricken.

For John himself did not appear as well nor as happy as he used to. Arthur remembered now that he had noticed this several times lately. Perhaps John was as unsettled as his feelings as Barbara was. Yet—if John loved the girl, what was wrong?

Arthur finally liked direct methods when these were practicable, so as soon as the conventional greetings were exchanged he put a blunt question.

An Abrupt Question

"John—what is the matter with you and Barbara?"

John started nervously, began a protest, then, checking himself, said as bluntly as his friend had spoken:

"I do not know. Things are not as they were—or as I thought they were. That is all I am sure of."

"How are they wrong?"

"Barbara is not happy. She says she is only 'silly and upset.' But she is easily moved to tears, and, as you have already noticed, she is pale and thin."

"You love her, don't you, John?"

There was no hesitation in the reply. "Yes, Paige, I love her dearly. Yet if, as I sometimes fear nowadays, my love makes her unhappy, I wish I had never told her of it."

The speaker rose and walked back and forth several times before saying:

"Arthur, this is no time for mincing matters. Does Barbara love me?"

Arthur looked up into the face of his friend. It was pale and stern, but there was not a sign of faltering to the steady eyes. This was a man who must know the truth, who could stand anything except uncertainty or deception.

"Sit down, John," Arthur advised. "I have something to tell you. But, first of all, I want to assure you that Bab has never said a word to me on the subject of her affection for you—one way or the other. She has, however, often told me how good and kind you are to her."

"Good and kind! That's the tone always!" the other declared bitterly. "That's not what I want! I am no brute to marry a girl who does not love me. I tell you, much as I want her, I would rather give her up."

"I believe you, John, and that is why I have come to you. Sit down and listen to me."

Analyzing the Situation

When his companion was seated Arthur continued:

"When Barbara became engaged to you she may have thought she loved you. She may have even thought that she loved somebody else.

"Yes, I mean that! There was a chap who loved her—and at first I think Bab cared for him. Then something came between them. No one—do not speak his name if you guess it!

"He played fair all the way through. So did she—or she thought she did. But I have wondered lately if she had discovered that she was mistaken—that after all she loved the younger chap."

There was a long silence. John Brandon was looking straight ahead of him out of the window into the golden October sunshine. When at last he spoke his voice was low.

"I must know the truth, old man. I can give her up—if I ought to. I cannot and will not let things continue as they are now. I shall ask her this very day"——

But Paige checked him.

"No, you will not ask her. You will sacrifice yourself for her happiness, John."

"How do you mean?"

"I mean the child must not be distressed and disturbed before she has her birthday celebration this evening. Come as if all was as usual. Try to be yourself. I know it will be hard—but it is for her sake.

"The man I spoke of just now will be present. The evening will prove just what Bab's feelings are —will prove to you, to her and to me. If she loves you she will know it then. If not"——

"If not," John interrupted. "Our engagement must be broken."

A half hour later Paige arose to leave. He took his friend's hand.

"You're a trump, John," he said. "The whitest chap I ever"——

The other smiled sadly.

"Not white—only human. And after all, old man, it should be decided that you and I belong to the past generation. Barbara does not. And youth must be served, you know."

To Help Nature Shed a Bad Complexion

Beauty devotees are enthusiastic over the rejuvenating qualities of ordinary mercolized wax. Nothing discovered within recent years accomplishes so much, so quickly, without harm or inconvenience. The principal reason for its wonderful merit is that it works in harmony with physiological laws, instead of hiding complexion defects, it removes them. It actually takes off the aged, faded, sallow, freckled or blotchy surface skin, gently and gradually. This is Nature's way of renewing complexions. When the skin-renewing process is retarded because of defective circulation or nerve tone, mercolized wax comes to the rescue and hastens the skin shedding. The new complexion which appears is a natural one, youthful, healthy, exquisitely beautiful. If you've never tried mercolized wax, get an ounce of it at the drug-store, use nights like cold cream, washing it off mornings—and have the surprise of your life.

Another natural beautifying treatment for wrinkled skin—is to bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is remarkably and almost instantaneously effective.—Advertisement.

ABOUT OUR GOOD FRIEND

Cochran

Copyright, 1920, by The Ledger Syndicate

COCHRAN
VARIATIONS — Corcoran, Coghrane.
RACIAL ORIGIN—Irish.
SOURCE—A given name.

THE family name of Cochran holds a high place in the annals of ancient Ireland, prior to the Anglo-Norman invasion, in which it appears as "O'Corcrain."

The name traces back through the O'Carrol, or the "O'Carbeil" clan to Owen More ("Rogban Mor" being closer to the Irish spelling) or Owen the Great. One of the descendants of "Rogban Mor" bore the sobriquet derived from the Irish word "corcra," meaning "red;" hence the family name of "O'Corcrain," meaning "the descendants of the Red One."

In the year 1040 there was an O'Corcrain who was abbot of Inisaltra, renowned as the most celebrated ecclesiastic of western Europe, both for his religion and his learning.

But being among the most bitter and relentless antagonists the Anglo-Norman invaders of the middle ages had to meet, the clan of O'Corcrain suffered bitterly at their hands, and as the Norman sway extended the clan sank into a political insignificance that it was never able to overcome.

Corcran, Corcoran and Gobbrans, with or without the prefixes "O" or "Mac," are merely anglicized versions of this family name, once powerful in the ancient Irish kingdom.

The first Cochran to settle in America was a William Cochran, who took up his dwelling on Short Creek, Pennsylvania, in 1772. He was the grandson of William Cochran and Lady Mary Bruce, of Ochiltree, in Ayrshire. In the late fifties this first Cochran came to America; Scotch-Irish, his descent is said to be, and it is further recorded that he arrived "with a small patrimony." Probably, as his historian remarks, he came as one of Braddock's soldiers, particularly so as they were a very military family in Scotland. Of the death of this Cochran, history itself makes record.

It was at the "Last Battle of the Revolutionary War," at Fort Henry, near Wheeling, Pennsylvania, that William Cochran was pursued by Indians, who had burned many of the garrison houses. He shot one, and, his gun empty, fled. The Indians pursued. He easily outdistanced them, but, on running up a hill, they got within range, and shot him dead. He was buried on his first homestead, where he rests today. He was the ancestor of a family which, for Scotch character, thrift, and progressiveness, has always been honored, wherever its members happened to live.

To mend broken marble mix some Portland cement with water to a thick paste. See that the edges of the marble are quite clean, then put some cement on both sides, press together very tightly, and tie till the cement has dried.

When washing towels, toilet covers or any other article with a fringe, well shake it before hanging out to dry, and also two or three times while it is drying. This will prevent the fringe from matting together and will save the labor of pulling or combing out.

Stocks Weak in an Active New York Market

BEARS ATTACK INDUSTRIALS

Steels and Motors Are the First Objectives in a Fierce Drive

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at the end of the morning, bears making steels and motors their first objectives in a fierce drive. Later they applied pressure to the whole list. Rails were the strongest group, but yielded before the end of the forenoon. Among carriers to sell at highs of 1920 to date were seaboard Airline common, Lake and Erie & Western and Baltimore & Ohio. Lows for the week were touched by several Motors, Chandler, Studebaker, Kelly Springfield, Willys Overland, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, American Woolen common, Bosch Magneto and Hide Leather common and preferred. Call money opening at 7 per cent. Demand sterling opened at $4.03 3-4 cut to $4.03 1-2 and $4.0670, up $.0005; lire at $.0416, unchanged and marks at $.0103, up $.0004.

MARKET OPENED STRONG.

The market was strong at the opening, initial gains ranging from fractions to a point or more. Later advances averaged small; they ran through the list and trading was active at the start. Sugars were strongest; issues at the outset, with steels and motors irregular. Maxwell sold at its highest level listed on the exchange. Low priced rails continued to be in demand among carriers. Among those to sell at highs for the year within a few minutes were St. Louis & San Francisco, Southern Railway, Colorado Southern, New Haven and Chesapeake & Ohio. Later and Pan American Petroleum sold at its 1920 lowest, while the preferred issue of this road sold at a record high. It was not long before selling pressure was concentrated upon steels and motors and they became weak. Mexican Petroleum led the list for gains during the first hour, advancing nearly five points. This was due in a great measure to a rush to cover short contracts. Tires were weak, but not especially active. Keystone sold at a year's low.

BANK STATEMENTS FAVORABLE.

The bank statements for last week were favorable on the whole, and reflected steadiness if not improvement in the money situation. The increase in the ratio of the New York Federal Reserve Bank was 43.7, the highest since the week of December 19, 1919. The reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve System was 43.2 against 42.8 the week before. New York Clearing House banks reported that surplus reserve increased $4,202,450.

But followers of the stock market are giving more attention to the monetary situation at present than to money rates, it being believed generally that the latter have reached their peak and that little is less confidence expressed as regards the industrial and commercial outlook. Price cutting has engendered great uncertainty among manufacturers and merchants as well.

QUIT MANUFACTURING MAIL ORDER SHOES

Sears, Roebuck & Co., the largest of mail order concerns, has quit manufacturing men's shoes, it is understood. It has previously operated its shoe factory at Holbrook, Mass., after shutting up its Littleton, N. H., plant last Spring. The plants average a daily production of 250 dozen pairs of shoes, or about 900,000 a year. It is figured that Sears, Roebuck & Co. did a gross annual business of about $4,500,000 in men's shoes.

But it will continue to manufacture women's and children's shoes, although its present production of this kind estimates but about 50 per cent. of normal capacity.

Boston City Loan Sold

City Treasurer Murray has sold a temporary City of Boston loan of $2,-650,000 in anticipation of taxes, dated Sept. 28, 1920, and due Nov. 24, 1920, to the First National Bank of Boston at 6 per cent., interest to follow. This new loan increases by $650,000 the city's borrowing for the year, now aggregating $5,650,000, but comparing with $13,000,000 for all of 1919.

Coal Supply Low

As a result of the "vacation" strike indulged in by the bituminous miners in the Pennsylvania region, it is estimated that the decrease in production approximated 3,500,000 tons.

Corporation Earnings

For the first half of this year the National Aniline & Chemical Company reports a profit after charges and taxes of $3,527,-95, the net for the year ended Dec. 31, 1919, net after charges and taxes, $1,-644,-5-4, and for 1918, $2,-50,-4-5.

Lehigh Valley's July gross was $6,027,628, against $5,742,300 in July, 1919. Increase at $826,653 or 15 per cent. This is the largest gross for any month in the company's history and amount of increase was exceeded only in May, 1920.

Net for July increased $1,-4-,-4- to $2,-4-,-4- over Central road was $5,-00,-25, which, equal to 8.18 on $4,-4-,-4- common stock.

It is estimated that the net earnings of the Standard Screw Company for 1920 will approximate $2,000,000, and it should be able to show approximately $90 a share on the common stock.

It is said that the net improvement for September sales of the Studebaker Corporation will be over $2,000,000 and for October $11,000,000 for August, on the basis of profits for last night and indications are the year's growth will set for 1920 should exceed $11,000,000.

COPPERS DOWN IN BOSTON

Local Market Was Irregular at the Start, But Soon Became Heavy

The Boston market had an irregular opening, but on initial transactions most active issues receded. The stock market showed heavy and before the end of the forenoon the prices were below the last level. Parking issues were firm under the leadership of International Products. Copper shares were weak. Elder sold at its previous low for the year. United Fruit sagged two points to set its first sale. Mexican Investment was strong and quite active in the first hour, advancing a point. United Drug common began with two points loss, but recovered half of this more than a point bedder on a few sales. Reo Motor sold down a point.

Point or more losses sustained by Boston & Maine preferred A, Quincy, Agricultural Chemical, U. S. Worsted & Edison.

Among issues to recede fractionally were American Woolen preferred, New Haven, United Shoe, National Leather, Shoe, Utah Apex, New Cornelia, Highcart and Gray & Davis.

Stocks to make small gains included Mexican Petroleum, Maryland Steel, New England Telephone, Swift & Co., International Products and Walworth.

CURB SOON WEAKENED.

The Curb opened with active issues higher in the ratio of two to one, but soon weakened. Active stocks at the start were Calumet & Arizona, Boston & Montana. Those to make initial gains were Arizona Silver, Tip Top, Bonanza & Montana, Mer Marine Development and Mutual. Among those to record an first sale were Bagdad, Palisade and Republic Navigation.

At the end of an hour Eureka was off 8 cents at 22 cents, Tip Top 3 cents at 11 cents, Boston & Montana 17 cents at 47 cents and Bagdad 1 cent at 21 cents. Among gains were Crystal 1 cent at 46 cents and Arizona Silver 2 cents at 22 cents. Mutual had lost its gain.

STEEL MAKERS WANT A HIGHER TARIFF

There is a good deal of speculation going on in business circles as to what will be the attitude of the American industry of the present tariff when Europe gets back to normal production, and there is evidence that of the $519,000,000 imports during August $279,000,000 were admitted duty free. Steel men want a higher tariff and one of them said:

"Helping our country in particular are recovering from the war and are entering production on a scale which promises to be worlds' record larger. In both countries there is apparently a minimum of labor trouble; in many plants they are working fourteen hours a day.

"Within a year these countries will be dumping their products on American shores and competing with American goods unless we have a strong protective tariff."

Immigration Statistics

As to the labor situation in this country, immigration bureau statistics indicate there will be no scarcity of reports that during the fiscal year ended with June 621,576 persons arrived in this country while 1,428,022 left it. During July this year there were approximately 80,000 arrivals and 54,000 departures, and during August 86,000 arrivals and 45,000 departures, during the week ended September 18, 21,744 persons landed at port of New York and 248 were detained.

Higher Stock Exchange Dues

It is proposed to raise annual dues of members of the New York Stock Exchange from $300 to $1,000, and President Remick is quoted concerning the change there are unlooked-for building expenditures and that the payroll has increased enormously.

STRIKE POSTPONEMENT HELP SSTOC KMARKET

By BROADAN WALL.

New York, Sept. 26.—Next to the price-cutting wave that is sweeping over the United States, the most important development of the past few weeks from a stock market point of view is the postponement of the British coal miners' strike. Both are matters of congratulation. Both mean a revival of industry and better times.

For some days the leading bankers of Wall Street have had private information from London to the effect that Lloyd George was going to put off the coal strike for six months.

While the market situation was based, according to these despatches, upon the fact that the strike was not, principally by breaker-boys and irresponsible persons and did not represent the real sentiment of labor. Success of the strike as planned would mean the overthrow of the British empire, say the bankers here, they are saying.

The whole financial world is watching the British coal situation. Every investor and little trader in Wall Street is as much interested in the British labor situation as he is in price-cutting in this country.

While the price-cutting wave inaugurated by Henry Ford alarmed a good many, it is now generally believes to be one of the most constructive developments since the war period began. Prices of all things must come down. The fact that it has already begun is proved by the sale of 500 Ford cars in one day by one New York agent. The people stood in line to get them. They are all back and more in a few years and will have in addition to the money the good will of the public.

Finally all prices will be on a retail basis again, and will, probably, it will be years before they reach the pre-war level.

Wages are not expected to fall for a year or two. In support of this theory there is the record of other wars after which wages were maintained until all other prices had been reduced, and then a readjustment took place. Everything went up before wages did, the wage-earner must have his fair share.

BIG VARIANCE IN COAL PRICE

Profiteering Charged by Consumers; Protests Over "Painted Rock"

Difference in the retail prices of hard coal in various communities, often a margin of from $2 to $5 a ton within a distance of comparatively few miles, is regarded by consumers as direct evidence of profiteering, judging from complaints today.

Retail coal prices in New York State are much lower than in Massachusetts and the reason cannot be found in the freight rates, which are in all instances the price margin surpasses the difference in freight tariff two and three times and more.

In Albany family coal is selling for $14 a ton, all the hard coal grades, which are bringing $16 a ton in Greater Boston, and, as high as $21 a ton in outlying districts. Dealers charge $14.25 a ton in Albany if not cash sales. In Lenox, in the Berkshires, coal is sold at $18.50 a ton, but there isn't any.

$17.50 A TON IN SPRINGFIELD.

The last retail prices quoted in Springfield were $17 and $17.50 but there isn't any nut, egg or stove coal on hand. Dealers are refusing to take orders as long in Greater Boston, there is a scant supply of pea coal which is bringing $16 and $16 a ton. Pea coal costs $14.25 in Boston.

Coupled with the price scandal are charges of adulteration of coal and short weight methods. Much "slag" or slate is reported to be mixed in coal sold of late and the quality is said to have grown poorer in proportion to the scarcity of the commodity. It is charged that high grade coal has been deliberately adulterated and that many deliveries have been found to be so poor that housekeepers in certain neighborhoods have christened their coal "painted rock."

PROTEST "STONE" COAL.

Housekeepers say it is outrageous to be compelled to pay such exorbitant prices for coal and criminal for dealers to sell anything but real coal at such rates. They say they "object to pay from $16 to $21 a ton for coal that is part stone."

Consumers are wondering what State Fuel Director Eugene C. Hultman is going to do about the price and kindred coal evils. They are particularly anxious about price reforms and for a semblance of standardization in Massachusetts. But Hultman is not discussing coal price problems now. A special coal committee appointed by Governor Coolidge, of which State Fuel Administrator Hultman is chairman, is busy collecting data and studying the fuel situation throughout the State. The first step taken by the committee was to make arrangements with the railroads to give as rapid transportation as possible to coal as shipments of anthracite get under way again at the mines.

PLENTY OF SOFT COAL.

The hard coal relief committee will meet in Boston on Tuesday, when representatives in the occupancy of offices at No. 15 Exchange street. The New England committee is finishing up its work relative to the soft coal supply for New England, which members report to be entirely adequate for industrial purposes the coming Winter.

Students of the fuel situation point out that when dealers complain that they are obliged to pay as high as $15 a ton at the mines for hard coal from independent operatives, they neglect to inform the public that they get "long tons" (2,240 pounds) and that when they sell to housekeepers they give "short tons" (2,000 pounds).

This means that the dealer saves 240 pounds from every ton that he buys at the mines which makes his profits bigger. Everyone conversant with the trade knows that a few, if any other lines of business, has there been a greater tendency to adulterate and give short weight. Evidences have been harvested by such methods. These tricks are not history by any means. They are practiced today and the consumers pay the fiddler.

BROOKLYN MAN HERE SEEKING LOST WIFE

The Boston police and the police of surrounding cities have been asked to locate Mrs. Margaret Foley, 24 years old, last seen on Bowdoin street, Brooklyn, N. Y., who left her home last Sunday with her two-months-old baby, presumably for friends in Charlestown. She has not been heard from since, and her husband is in Boston seeking her.

California's Oil Output

The production of crude oil in California during August totalled 30,609,290 barrels, the best showing since 1914. The daily average production was 1,-444 barrels by the Midway-Sunset field makes it the leading district in this country. It surpasses the Burkburnett output. Crude oil stocks continued to increase in August, being 23,434,444 barrels at the end of the month, against 24,406,000 at end of July. This is the lowest mark since August, 1916, and is result of the largest shipments, 321,955 barrels daily, ever sent from the state.

Would You Sell a Gold Dollar for 60c?

Some owners of Leon's Theatres stock have been offered $60 a share this month for $11.60 to $12.60 a share. Some assume the shrewd buyers have been cussing it up at about half its value.

Send for statement and use good judgment.

The Corporation owns over 14,-000,000 in gross annual business earning over 25% and paying 1½% quarterly. Free of State tax and Federal normal tax.

I still have some stock for sale at $14.00 a share.

MANY LIQUOR SEIZURES MADE IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Sept. 27.—One federal officer and a squad of police inspectors visited several places and made four arrests following the seizure of much liquor and the apparatus for manufacturing it. Sam Sarokil of No. 32 Concord street was arrested. A fair sized still in the bedroom and the second-story tenement was at work, turning out goods. A gallon of moonshine and two barrels of mash were found on the premises, the police claim. At the store of Th

England Will Demand Soon We Collect Mexican Damages or Pay Ourselves

Washington, Sept. 27.—Great Britain will shortly demand that the United States collect more than $100,000,000 in damages from Mexico or pay that sum herself, it was learned today. Her intention to make this issue is known both to the State Department and to certain members of Congress.

The British claims are based upon damages to and deterioration of oil and other properties in Mexico, as well as upon the murder of William Benton, and various other British subjects during the past eight years.

FRANCE TO MAKE CLAIMS.

They will be followed by similar claims from France based in large part upon the spoliation of certain French banks in Mexico City and their branches in other cities throughout Mexico.

On that occasion, Great Britain went so far as to send her own diplomatic agents to Mexico City to investigate, but was persuaded to withdraw them by the promise that the United States would take responsible for the situation.

That the United States is well aware of Great Britain's intention was made clear today when an official said this government is ready with a complete set of counter-claims. They are based in large part upon British depredations upon American commerce at sea.

600 CARGOES WERE AT ISSUE.

These depredations began with seizure of the Standard Oil ship Brindella, in 1914, and continued without intermission until the United States entered the war. At one time no fewer than 600 cargoes were at issue. One group of seizures alone was valued at $25,000,000.

Each was protested by the State Department and Great Britain was constantly notified by the President that she would be held "strictly responsible" for her act. When the controversy was at its height, America became a belligerent.

One group of American interests, the packers, have settled their claim with Great Britain but the aggregate of unsettled claims, it was stated, runs into hundreds of millions of dollars.

FALL TELLS OF CRISIS.

Senator Fall is credited with being the best informed member of Congress on Mexico. He expressed belief today that Great Britain and France will both demand payment of vast sums from the United States.

"I fully recognize," said the Senator, "that at the time we accepted this mandate matters were very grave for us. Any interference on the part of Great Britain in Mexico would have been very embarrassing. But I never could understand when the President gave assurances to Great Britain, why he did not give similar assurances to Japan.

"It was on the border at the time and while the President that I saw trouble ahead unless he included Japan. Every country has vast interests in Mexico.

"My telegram was ignored, and within a few weeks a Japanese battleship appeared off the west coast to give substance to the protection we had failed to offer."

Paris Woolen Coat Is Blow to Fur Trust

Miss Gish, with collar of coat turned up, showing protection afforded to face and ears in wintry weather.

Lillian Gish wearing latest wrinkle in women's apparel

Don't worry, ladies, if those furs you had your eyes on have gone up to $1,000 this season. The Parisiennes are going to beat the fur trust this Winter by wearing woolen coats, and wool is going down.

Lillian Gish, the star of "Way Down East," will lead the style in this country. Miss Gish was presented by her mother, who landed from Europe two or three days ago, with the very latest wrinkle in coats, and she has posed for the American so that the women readers can get the idea.

This coat came from Maison Genne Lanvin. It is made of French wool from the province of Dombreuil, where the great Joan of Arc once tended flocks.

The field color of the coat is peacock blue with a darker blue stripe running over it. The style is a sort of Frenchified Ulster. The outstanding feature is the fact that it is embordered with wool and blue beads. It is lined with dark blue serge, with an interlining of wool.

You notice that the large collar is fastened to the side, while the coat is held about the waist by a woolen cord. The coat is very light in weight, can be carried in a small bundle, yet it is as warm as a fur coat.

Over in Paris they are very short of coal and the way you can muffle yourself up in this garment is very practical.

40 ARRESTED IN RAID ON WOONSOCKET CLUB

Woonsocket, R. I., Sept. 27.—Two prize fighters, a former politician, and thirty-seven other men were arrested charged with gambling on the Lord's day, when the police raided a club room on the second floor of the 56 Social street while a dice game was in session. Each paid a fine of $15 and costs when they were later arraigned in court.

Clemmeny Hovila, Young Gouin, Rhode Island's welterweight champion, and former Representative Alexander Renaud were included among those taken into custody.

How the Republicans Avoid League of Nations Issue

The New York World reports that Republican leaders are becoming shy of the league, as an issue, and they fear that Cox, aided by President Wilson, "will make it the decisive factor in the election."

On the day that the World printed this statement Senator Harding devoted an entire speech to Mr. Wilson's unpopular foreign covenant; Charles E. Hughes opened the campaign in New Jersey with a 7,000-word speech attacking it; Henry Cabot Lodge addressed the Republican State Committee in Massachusetts on the same great issue, which is much more important than any question of party or of individual candidates.

And in New York Judge Miller, who had not yet been officially notified of his nomination for Governor, made his first short speech in the campaign. He said that, inasmuch as he could speak only briefly, he would discuss the League of Nations only. Then he said:

President Wilson has called Article X. of the League covenant the "heart of the treaty." It is also the heart of the controversy in this campaign. We must therefore assume that when Mr. Cox says he is in complete accord with Mr. Wilson on the treaty he had Article X. in mind. So that this is the basis on which Mr. Wilson and Mr. Cox are willing to go in on and Senator Harding is determined to stay out.

Mr. Wilson says that through Article X. we assume nothing but a moral obligation to protect the territory of other members of the League against aggression from without.

I read in the newspapers that Mr. Cox has said that such a moral obligation involved no risk, for if it should be found not to be the right thing to do to live up to it, it would be immoral to do so and moral to refrain from doing so and that this morality would balance the immorality involved in breaking our solemn obligation as a nation.

That is the way every liar that I have ever known reasons. England and France assumed that obligation, but England repudiated it because she was unwilling to fight for Poland to protect that country—a member of the League—from external aggression.

England welched, and Lloyd George as an excuse said that Poland was the aggressor in her war. But suppose the United States had been in. There is no doubt what we would have done—this country would have lived up to its plighted word. There is no doubt we would have been called upon to do so, for we have the material, the means and the men.

There never was in all history such an attempt to impose upon an unwilling people the will of one man as the attempt to get the country to accept the unamended League covenant.

If all the Republican leaders continue to "avoid" the league in this way, Mr. Cox will certainly have no difficulty in keeping it the decisive issue that it is.

No Danger to Depositors Even if Banks Close

The American called attention the other day to the fact that the only danger which depositors in the trust companies and savings banks need to fear is the danger from their own foolish, panic-stricken fear.

Bank Commissioner Allen has demonstrated that he is one of the best bank commissioners we have ever had, and it is his duty, and he has the power, to keep the banks in safe condition, and to close them long before their condition is dangerous.

This he does scrupulously and fearlessly. When he closes a bank it does not mean that the depositors are in danger. If you should go sailing in a boat, and a storm came up, and the captain told you that it would be wise to go back to shore before the storm reached you, it would not prove that you have been in danger. The only danger in such a case would be if you got panic-stricken and upset the boat.

There is no bank that could pay all the depositors all their money at one time. Banks could not do business if they had to have funds sufficient to pay all depositors all their money at one time. Banks make money by loaning their depositors' money to other people, who promise to pay it back at certain times. They can get that money back only when the day comes when it is to be paid back, and not before. So when depositors get panic-stricken and all rush in on one day for their money, the strongest bank in the world could not pay them.

Depositors should beware of rumors and anonymous reports about banks. We do not know of a case where depositors actually lost any money in a bank which had been closed. Before a depositor can lose money the stockholders are obliged to pay to the depositors not only the full amount of the stock they have subscribed to but twice as much, which makes an enormous reserve fund for the protection of the depositors.

Let everybody cool off. Do not rock the boat. There is no danger until the Bank Commissioner says there is, and especially those banks which the Bank Commissioner does not close are safe.

Our hero, to liven up his campaign, stages a movie show, picturing how nice it will be for Uncle Sam if he joins the League of Nations. But some one pulls the wrong film on him. It was a raw deal. Who could have done it? Maybe those biased newspapers are at the bottom of it. Well, anyhow, don't miss the next instalment. It is full of sheer, tense, heart-compelling tragedy and everything like that.

More Truth Than Poetry

Long Life and Lambrequins

By S. E. KISER

A prominent physician of Washington says men would live much longer than they do if they never shaved. Enoch, Jared and Methuselah, who had wads of whiskers and lived for hundreds of years, are mentioned as references.

A SCIENTIST informs us now
That shaving shortens man's existence;
The patriarchs, he says, knew how
To keep death at a decent distance.
"By having beards that lured the breeze
And keeping razors from their faces
The ancients lived for centuries—
We might record a hundred cases."

THANKS, worthy scientist! You give
A promise that we long have wanted;
If, whiskered, we may learn to live,
The future we will face undaunted.
The barbers may object, our wives
May say that whiskers are unsightly,
But, being sure of lengthened lives,
Why not dismiss their protests lightly?

IF lack of shaving was the cause
Of Enoch's length of days, I'll never
Be shaved again, for let me pause
To say I'd like to live forever.
I grant you that the cost is high,
Still living has its compensations—
At least it seems worth while to try
To last a dozen generations.

ONCE every century or two
We might select new wives to cheer us,
Thus starting our careers anew
And raising children to revere us.
Thanks, noble scientist! You fill
Our minds with visions that are pleasant—
The ladies, being beardless, still
Must keep on dying, as at present.

WE'LL BE TENTING TONIGHT

Once it was cheaper to move than to pay rent, but now you can't get a chance to do either.

Letters to the Editor

Hit Nail on Head

Editor Boston American:

It does an Italian heart good to occasionally run across an editorial such as "Italy the Moral Leader of Governments of Europe," which appeared in a recent issue of the Boston American. You "hit the nail on the head" regarding Italy and the present administration. It is gratifying to note that some understand and sympathize with us.

One thing more, Mr. Editor, may I ask why, after scaring us out of our skins with the horrors of the earthquake in northern Italy, nothing more was ever mentioned in any of the Boston papers. Many interested cannot read the Italian papers and were anxious to learn further news of the disaster, as the number of bodies recovered had not been ascertained, thousands were homeless, etc.

Morale

In the days of the French Commune a captain was seized on a baseless pretext and trundled in a tumbrel to the guillotine. His young wife, in tears and agony, catching sight of him, tried to press through the crowd to stand by his side. Seeing her he shouted: "Take her away. I don't know her. I never saw her," because he knew that recognition would involve her to his doom.

What was that? Religion? Honor? Love?

Whatever it was, it is about the finest flower humanity has ever grown. It is Morale.

DOWN IN the North End.
WHERE BOSTON has.
MANY TENEMENTS.
ABOVE STONE streets.
AND FILLS the streets.
WITH SWARMS of kids.
WHO PLAY at games.
TILL AUTO trucks.
COME LUMBERING by.
AND DRIVE them off.
I SAW a girl.
A LITTLE girl.
SCARCE TWO years old.
WHO WATCHED the games.
AND ALL the time.
HELD IN her arms.
A MUCH used doll.
AND WHERE she sat.
UPON THE steps.
HER MOTHER sat.
AND ALSO watched.
AND ALL at once.
I HEARD a scream.
A LITTLE scream.
SCARCE TWO years strong.
AND SAW the doll.
STRIKE ON its head.
UPON THE stone.
AND SAW a boy.
COME SPEEDING down.
ON WHATEVER it is.
YOU CALL those things.
WITH A couple of wheels.
THAT SCOOT along.
WITH ONE foot on
AND ONE foot pushing.
AND THE cruel wheel.
OF THE scooting thing.
REACHED THE very same spot.
AT THE very same time.

NATURE HAS TAKEN HER TIME TO PERFECT

By Garrett P. Serviss

"The other day I noticed an insect about 1-25d of an inch long propelling itself over a sheet of paper by tumbling from 'head to foot,' as an acrobat does. It was too small for me to notice where the head was, but I could see no legs. It occurred to me that nature, in the course of evolution, had done considerable experimentation before deciding on the means of locomotion we human beings use. Would like to read your views on this subject?

"J. F. M'G."

YOU are right in supposing that nature has been a great experimenter, arriving with uneconomical efforts at economical results. How certain great, underlying, primordial principles came to be established we cannot tell, but nature plainly shows us how she has utilized those principles, having often taken a great deal of time about it.

Your tumbling insect, going heels over head, was a crude utilization of the principle of the wheel. It has been said that nature never made use of the wheel type of motion in furnishing living creatures with the power of locomotion. Even human beings when they walk or run roll over their extremities. This was shown by Pettigrew fifty years ago.

Foot Illustration

As he pointed out: "The foot of the extremity which happens to be upon the ground for the time forms the centre of a circle, the radius (he meant an arc) of which is described by the trunk in forward motion. In like manner the foot which is off the ground and swinging forward pendulum fashion may be said to roll or rotate upon the trunk, the head of the femur forming the centre of a circle, the radius of which is described (terminated) by the advancing foot. A double rolling movement is thus established, the body rolling on the extremity the one instant, the extremity rolling on the trunk the next."

Double Rolling

The result of this, as any one may observe by careful watching of the motions of a walker, is an up and down swaying of the body which rises as the trunk is lifted over the advanced foot and sinks as the other foot is thrown forward.

"The double rolling movement is necessary to continuity of motion. If there was only one movement there would be dead points in walking and running similar to what occur in leaping." But even a leaping body describes a curve imposed by gravity. Those must be first a rise and then a fall.

In fact, so far from having ignored or neglected the wheel principle, nature has employed it in a multitude of ways. Rotation is utilized in legs, wings, fins, tails, etc. Although very few animals habitually progress by rolling the body as a whole, as your little insect appeared to do, yet many are able, on occasion, to move in that way, such movement being facilitated by adjustments of their bones and muscles intended to meet the requirements of rotary motions such as described above.

BE READY FOR YOUR OPPORTUNITY

You often complain because other men are so fortunate in their investments.

You say it is just their luck and you never get the opportunity.

But if you had the opportunity tomorrow to invest in a gilt-edged proposition that you would feel perfectly safe, where would you get the money?

Who is to blame that you would have no money to swing it?

You are unwilling to deny yourself—isn't that the reason why you are not in condition to pick up deals which you see?

You sure cannot blame this to ill luck.

You know full well that it is a difficult matter to get much ahead unless you get some money to working for you.

Knowing this, why allow the earnings which might be invested to slip away from you?

You cannot continue to have the good time which requires the expenditure of all your money aside from your living expenses and save anything to invest.

These are not new facts, but they are facts worth pondering—digesting.

Don't blame your luck when you are the guilty party to your failure to make a stake.

HOW VESTED ILLUSIONS STAY OUR FEET

By the Spectator

A SENTENCE used by Mr. Santayana, the writer upon philosophy, contains two words that leap out before the eye.

"Professional philosophers," runs the sentence, "are usually only apologists; that is, they are absorbed in defending some VESTED ILLUSION or some eloquent idea."

The two words that loom up as a remarkable combination here are "vested illusion."

And we are reminded that not only is the way of human feet blocked by Vested Interests, of which we hear a lot, but as well by Vested Illusions, on which we have not thought enough.

To list a few, note:

First, the universal false basis of Taxation, which is that Government should pay itself by plundering the successful. The whole idea is to take the money from those who have the most of it.

But it is wrong because it is based on injustice, and it is compact of robbery.

One Honest Way

There is but one honest basis of taxation. It is to collect from every man, be he rich or poor, as near an equivalent as possible for the benefit he receives from the Government.

Another Vested Illusion is Class Pride.

This has many forms. Sometimes it masquerades as patriotism, as for generations British and French hated each other heartily, it is the core of Islam to detest the Christian, it lives in a perpetual antagonism between Chinese and Japanese, it flourishes in the South as a contempt for the negro, and in Mexico as bitterness toward the "Gringo" or citizen of the United States, history and literature are full of the class pride of nobles and their scorn of the commons, and modern life is exhibiting a hatred quite as violent on the part of the proletariat toward the bourgeois and the aristocrat.

The Gold Standard

Another Vested Illusion is the Gold Standard.

The idea that the entire economic fabric of the world should rest upon the basis of one metal, the supply of which is a matter of chance, needs only to be stated to be estimated at its real unsoundness.

Over and over again economists have shown us a better basis, such, for instance, as a group of necessities, including wheat, cotton, iron, etc.; or the land, which is fixed and unescapable; or an international agreement and guaranty.

And another Vested Illusion, although this does not exhaust the list, might be called the Necessity of Competition.

It is the notion that men, classes, groups and nations can accomplish nothing unless they pull against each other.

The fact that all the gains of civilization have been made by pulling together does not disturb the complacency of the believer, who goes on forever, assuming that we go forward by fighting.

Hence strikes, lockouts, political parties, wars and preparedness for wars, and the whole monstrous folly of universal waste.

Stars and Stripes

Some men understand just how to fill out a claim for health insurance; others are in the asylum.

Many a man who did not hesitate to charge in the face of a hail of machine-gun bullets has surrendered to woman's tears.

Whenever you hear anyone saying that the country is going to the bow-wows, just ask him by what majority he was defeated for public office.

Clothes don't make the man, but they keep him out of jail.

Climb the ladder of wages and prices climb with you; descend and you descend alone.

Since the per cent. is not more than one-half of one, fewer autos and express trains are meeting on the grade crossings.

Look for faults and you will find faults; look for virtues and you will find virtues; look for neither and you will find both.
